'DEAR SIR: YOU'RE A.....'

Indignant writers of letters to editors have long maintained that news writers are skunks, but when a skunk becomes a writer, that's news.

Winsome Betty Winkler will be starred for the third time in Arch Oboler's current series of dramas when she appears in "Happy Year" over WEAF, Saturday, at 10:30 p. m.

Miss Winkler, who is heard regularly from NBC's Chicago studios in Girl Alone and other popular productions, is considered by Oboler to be one of the most talented young actresses in radio.

He cast her frequently when he was writing the Lighthouse Out there. Last April, just after he started his present series, he introduced her to make a special trip to New York to star in "The Last Man." When he visited Chicago in May, Betty was his choice for an equally important role in "The Word." And now he is stopping off there on a trip to Hollywood in order to use her in his latest play.

Art For Your Sake, a new public service program designed to accomplish for the graphic arts what the NBC Music Appreciation Hour has done for music, will be introduced as a SATURDAY night feature of WEAF from 7:30 to 8 p. m.

This new series, presented in cooperation with the National Art Society, is intended to acquaint Americans better with the great masterworks of painting, to interpret their less obvious messages and show how these works contribute to the enrichment of life in our day.

Each broadcast will present a dramatization concerning the life and work of some great artist with discussion of one of his masterpieces by Dr. Bernard Myers, of the University of Chicago.

New Milton Berle Program Will Make Debut Saturday

Gag Master To Emcee New Type Show Over WEAF AT 8:30 P. M.; Col. Stoopnagel Is First Guest

Col. Lemuel Q. Stoopnagel is picked to be the first guest-gagmaster on Milton Berle's new weekly program, "Stop Me If You've Heard This One" which makes its debut Saturday at 8:30 p. m. over WEAF.

Deviating from the usual quiz type of program, "Stop Me If You've Heard This One" is concerned primarily with gags. Berle, as emcee, will read various gags and a Board of Gagbusters, composed of Col. Jay C. Flippen, Harry Hershfield and a guest gagmaster, will attempt to stop Berle with the gag payoff before he finishes telling it.

The radio audience participation angle enters the Berle show with listeners contributing the jokes. Those contributing jokes used on the show will receive a cash award. If the Board of Gagbusters misses the payoff, the cash award is doubled to the originator of the gag.

A different guest band will be used each week, with Joe Rines and his orchestra set for the initial program.

Instituting a new guest star policy with a swing twist, Benny Goodman will start playing host to the instrumental and vocal swing specialists of America, commencing Saturday, 10:00 p. m. over WEAF, when he introduces Mildred Bailey, "Queen of the Blues," as his first visitor.

The wife of Red Norvo, the band-leader, with whose musicians she has made many appearances in cabarets and on the stages of the country's leading motion picture theatres, Mildred Bailey is related to music on her brother's side too. The brother is Al Rankin, originator of "Saturday Night Swing Parties" over the air, and active in musical circles.

Mildred is known as the "Rocking Chair Lady" because of her popularizing of that tune, but also has put over such other songs as "Week End of a Private Secretary," and assorted blues numbers. She is 5 feet 2 inches tall, "weighs plenty," and has black hair and brownish eyes. She is a direct descendant to General Robert E. Lee. Though she sings, her hobby remains the piano of her girlhood days.

SECURITY ZONE

This is the neutrality wall set up at Panama City by 21 American republics aimed at the protection of inter-American shipping routes. Sinking of a British freighter off the Brazilian coast (marked by cross) sped the action which was further modified by exclusion of territorial waters of foreign possessions in the Americas.

Those points are indicated by numerals. The situation was further complicated by Argentina's claim to possession of Falkland Islands (5) which are held by Great Britain.
