There was also one out in the eighth that afternoon back in Herber, Gantenbein for Mulleneaux, 1927, when the Pirates broke through the southpaw's flawless Hakle, Uram. Points after touchdown pitching.

Though there were eight other two-hit World Series games, there has never been a better pitched ball game in all the inter-league clashes. The only Red to get on base in the first seven innings was Werber, who walked in the fourth. But he was erased immediately at second as Frey fanned on a threeand-two count. Lombardi and Werber were the only others to reach first, and they didn't get any farther. Monte struck out eight, Craft being his victim three times. His curve ball was breaking like a fork of lightning and his fast ball sent shivers down the spines of the baffled Cincinnati batters. The crowd didn't seem to appreciate fully what a pitching masterpiece it was watching, for when Lombardi's spell-breaking single rang out, you'd never think from its reaction that a classic had been destroyed.

in a World Series was still a record that would make Pearson unique.

An entry in the record books credits Ed Reulbach of the Cubs with pitching a one-hit game on October 10, 1906, against the White Sox, but this is an inaccuracy that has been disproved by several reliable authorities. Monte practically had the knit tied around his one-hitter after getting the first two batters in the ninth when, for the second time, line. Parker Hall tossed a nineyard pass to Jim Benton and then Johnny Drake, in four thrusts at the line, plunged over for the first score.

Two plays later Ray Nolting fumbled on the Bears' 21-yard marker. Hall picked up six on an off-tackle shot and then passed to Benton going over the goal line.
The Bears opened the second with a quick thrust through the air. From their own 29-yard line a pass from Patterson to Famiglietti brought the ball to the 50 and then Bill Osmanski bucked his way to the Rams' 22; Patterson passed wide to Bob MacLeod around right for a touchdown.

Deserting the air, the Bears gave the ball to Osmanski after Patterson's pass to the former Holy Cross star brought the ball to the Rams' 15-yard stripe. On five smashes Osmanski carried over, and the score was tied when Manders kicked the extra point.
Bob MacLeod plucked Hall's pass out of the air a few minutes later and romped from his own 40yard line to a touchdown.
