Yanks Were Tops in Fielding, Too

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—The powerful Yankees were the fielding marvels of the 1939 baseball season, American League averages showed today.

The Bronx Bombers led the league in fielding with a percentage of .978—five points more than the Yanks' 1938 percentage. The Chicago White Sox finished second with .972.

The Yanks made only 126 errors. In double plays the Yanks, with 159, were second to the Washington Senators, who made 167.

The league fielding showed a decline of two points from .971 in 1938 to .969. Detroit, the fielding leader in 1938, dropped from .976 to .967 for sixth place.

The Yankees also contributed four players to the all-star defensive team—Shortstop Crosetti, Catcher Dickey, and Outfielders Selkirk and DiMaggio. The all-star fielding team, composed of players who participated in 100 or more games, and percentages follows:

1B—George McQuinn, Browns, .993.
2B—Charlie Gehringer, Tigers, .977.
3B—Ken Keltner, Indians, .974.
SS—Frank Crosetti, Yankees, .968.
OF—George Selkirk, Yankees, .989.
OF—Barney McCosky, Tigers, .936.
OF—Joe DiMaggio, Yankees, .986.
C—Bill Dickey, Yankees, .989.
P—Al Milnar, Indians, 1.000.

Jim Norris Acted Wisely in Not Pressing Charges Against Stewart

By DAN PARKER

NEW YORK—I think Jim Norris the elder used far better judgment in not pressing his complaint against Referee Billie Stewart before the board of governors of the National Hockey league, than he did in publicly castigating Stewart during a recent game between the Chicago Blackhawks and Toronto Maple Leafs in Chicago.

On the night in question, the multimillionaire owner of the stadium in which the game was being played "rode" Stewart unmercifully, charging him with letting the Blackhawks "get away with murder." Chicago fans were astounded by the spectacle and couldn't quite figure out why the Blackhawks' landlord should be so bitter against his tenants while rooting for one of the few teams in the National Hockey league from which he doesn't derive financial benefit. Maybe, Mr. Norris was trying to show his impartiality by rooting for Toronto. But whatever the cause, he did well not to press his complaint against Stewart. Had he done so, hockey fans might have rallied to the defense of the underdog and asked what kind of business hockey is when one man (Jim Norris by name can at one and the same time be:

Owner of the Detroit Red Wings.

Landlord of the Chicago Blackhawks.

Co-owner of the New York Rangers.

Landlord of the New York Americans.

Landlord of the Boston Bruins.

Rooter of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

P. S.—Les Canadiens, in Jim's home town, want to know if he has gone high hat since leaving Montreal and is singling them out as the only team in the league to be snubbed. Jim you see, has nothing to do with Les Canadiens.

The estimable Remy Dorr, race track operator extraordinary, called me from New Orleans Thursday and protested that he isn't in charge of the pari-mutuel department at the Fair Grounds track where Robert S. Eddy, Jr., his partner in the operation of a book on the New York tracks, is head man.

"Stuff like that hurts my reputation!" protested Remy. "It took me 15 years to build up the reputation I've got."

I can believe Remy on this point. Also I find out that he isn't in charge of the pari-mutuel department at the Fair Grounds track, although he wielded tremendous influence there formally. But everything else I said about the Miracle of the Identically Priced Closing Favorites goes.

Mathematicians figured out for me that, with a crowd of 4,500 at the track the chance of two horses closing at exactly the same price, after state taxes and track percentage had been deducted, and allowing for a 10-cent break is one in 4,000,000.

Yet, the management of the Fair Grounds track not only tries to explain away the fact that there were 13 such occurrences in 15 days of racing by calling it "a freak of pari-mutuel betting," but blandly continues the practice.

Tuesday, in the seventh race, Dreamy Ann, the winner, was closing co-favorite with U Demon at $2.10. Thus, bookies who accepted bets on the closing favorite didn't have to pay off. It was a "convincer." The four million to one shot won twice on Wednesday. In the fourth, Copper Lad, the winner, closed at $3.90 a co-favorite with Noah's Pride, again saving the books from paying to closing favorite bettors. But that wasn't enough for one day. In the seventh race, on the same card, Eddie Gardner and Peachypie closed favorites at $2.50. In this case, however, it was the bettors who were saved as Eddie Gardner finished second and Peachypie, fourth.

I challenge the management of the Fair Grounds track or anyone else to produce in all the history of racing anything even remotely resembling this situation. The thing happens about once in four years, except at New Orleans where of course anything can happen, and usually does.

George Vergara, the football official, has just discovered that Shakespeare anticipated modern razzle dazzle football by a matter of three centuries. In Act III, Scene 3 of "Hamlet," the following dialogue takes place:

KING—What do you call the play?

HAMLET—"The Mouse Trap."

Yes, we won't buy Bonura,
We'll have no Bonura today.
We'll take Chiozza, Kampouris and Manuel Salvo—
For them our hard cash we'll pay.
But, YES—We'll pass up Bonura,
They'll have to give Zekey away!

There will probably be a vacancy on the boxing commission after the first of the year. Deputy Commissioner Tom Farley is slated to be appointed U. S. Marshal. Applicants for his job are requested to line up on the right.

Benny Fields tells of the tout who approached a sucker and asked him for $1,000 to fix a five-horse race. "Two hundred for each jockey," he explained, out of the left corner of his mouth. The sucker bit. An hour later, the tout came back, demanding $200 more.

"What's the idea? Is this a shakedown," protested the system player.

"I'll tell you how it is," whispered the grifter, this time through the right corner of his yap. "I forgot to tell you it's gonna be photo finish, and I'll need $200 for the camera man."

Woman Sits in Room Nearby While Thief Flees With Purse

While Palma Nelson, 215 W. Mifflin st., sat in her living room Tuesday night, a thief entered her bedroom and stole her purse, police reported today. The purse contained a watch, scissors, and pen valued at $5.50 and a check which was recovered later on E. Johnson st.
