Informal dress in preferred during rehearsal by Kay Thompson, who leads the Rhythm Singers on "Tune Up Time." Sometimes it's riding clothes, for Kay is an enthusistic equestrienne. Or it might be a tennis dress or some other sports costume. Occasionally it's a flying suit, for the CBS star-is an en-thusiastic flier and hopes soon to have a pilot's license. For the broadcast, of course, Kay always wears a formal

New York Thirsts as High Water Blesses Us

day, you folks who live in Madison, tatorship over all city affairs but watch the never-failing silvery this possibility has not yet been 000,000 a year, H. H. Bennett stream, and be thankful you're not raised.

'An Extended Drouth'

resident of New York City. The nation's largest city today is faced with a serious shortage of the precious fluid because of an extended drought. Madison, victim of the driest December since year, is assured of an adequate Source—that is the sole reason dom from worry. New York's supply is dependent upon its reservoirs, which are filled by streams vitally affected by the drought there. Madison's deep wells have been little affected.

Although Madison received only .28 inches of precipitation in December, compared to a normal 1.63 inches for the month, city water department officials have not been concerned. About 8,000,000 gallons of water were used daily here in 1939. Should the consumption increase, the city has made plans to drive a new well on the Monona golf course.

But in New York City, citizens heard a vastly different story Sat-

Small boys gamboled about the in another way the city tried to in Madison. drive home to its 7,200,000 inhabitants the grim fact that waspring unless there is meantime deluge of rain and snow... Officials have hesitated to bring too bluntly to the public the consciousness of the gravity of the drought situation. But reservoirs once thought inexhaustible are so dangerously depleted that wells abandoned almost a quarter of a century ago have been reopened.

New York uses more water than any city in the world—almost 1,000,000,000 gallons a day. This is drawn from reservoirs whose normal capacity is about 210,-000.000.000 gallons. The subnormal rain and snowfallsince last summer have reduced the reservoirs to about 125,000,000,000 gallons-a decrease of 50 per

Every effort is being made to conserve water. The department of street cleaning has stopped flushing streets; schools are teaching children cleanliness still can be next to godliness without water waste: householders have been asked to repair leaky fix tures and a squad of 200 inspectors will soon begin a houseto-house canvass to make sure this is being done.

In 178 large hotels, placards have been posted in all rooms calling attention to the "extended drought" and asking cooperation through minimum use of water.

Engineers in the office of Water Commissioner Joseph Good-

The city already is drawing! water from every source available to it and will have no additional supply until the great Delaware aqueduct is completed in 1944. Thus any disappointment in the spring rains and thaws will force the city into water rationing. How this would be done has not yet been determined, but the matter is causing serious concern to municipal officials.

Commissioner Goodman would not guess at what might happen should the drought extend beyoud the spring. He described purification of sea water as "too difficult to consider" at present. In an extremity such as a water shortage the board of health has
