DISCUSSION IS HELD BY CLUB

The Central Senior Hi-Y held the second of a series of discussions on "Boy and Girl Friendships" at the Y. M. C. A. Monday night.

The panel discussion was led by Hi-Y Advisor W. D. Larrick and was composed of Rev. Neal D. Newlin, Miss Zalia Harbaugh, Dorothy Becher, Thelma Von Almen, Barbara Neely, Jean Morris, Bob Brentlinger, Floyd Bruenin, Tom Evans, and George Vucovich. Miss Gayle Howey, dean of girls at Central, who opened the subject the previous week, was also present to furnish material.

The boys and girls in the panel, as well as other members in the club, participated in the discussion freely and gave serious consideration to the problems of youth. Rev. Newlin, who has had considerable experience in these discussions among high school and college students, and Miss Harbaugh in her work among girls gave mature judgment on the various questions and problems.

Judge King said that he couldn't agree with Daugherty that he was sentenced on a "legal" holiday. Saturday afternoon may be a holiday to a lot of people, but it is not listed as such in the statute books, the court held.

Deanna Durbin, Comedy Team Are Attractions At State

Lovely Miss Starred In "First Love;" Laurel And Hardy Make Nonsense In Foreign Legion Farce, "Flying Deuces"

An unforgettable experience in everyone's life forms the basis for the State theatre feature where Deanna Durbin is being starred in "First Love." The film ably handles the light and humorous side of those adolescent symptoms, with Hollywood additions, which results in first-rate entertainment. Laurel and Hardy, ace comedy team, are starred in "Flying Deuces," a Foreign Legion farce.

Clark Gable, in a rough, tough, and energetic role as an escaped convict, is co-starred with Joan Crawford in "Strange Cargo" at the Ohio theatre. Adventures encountered in an open boat by eight desperadoes and a cynical cafe entertainer form the basis for a fast-moving story, with a well-chosen cast headed by Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre and Paul Lukas.

A beautiful love story with the quality and flavor of honest truth and realism is "The Shop Around the Corner," at the Sigma, with Margaret Sullavan and James Stewart starred. Frank Morgan, as the gruff but kindly employer, Sullavan and Stewart as rival clerks, and William Tracy, the office boy, give the picture life, warmth, drama, suspense and comedy. Commencing Wednesday is "Earl of Chicago," starring Robert Montgomery, and "Parole Fixer."

The greatest celluloid contribution to the society history of America, "The Grapes of Wrath," continues a successful run at the Quilna theatre. Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, Russell Simpson, Charley Grapewin and Dorris Bowdon, head the cast in the story of the Joad family, from their eviction from their farm across the west to the "promised land" of California, and their difficulties in the "promised land."

The Lyric theatre offers an exciting adventure film with a modern oriental setting in "Barricade" starring Warner Baxter and Alice Faye. Caught in the war-torn area of China, the couple finds romance and exctement amid the destruction and dangers of a major conflict. Also showing is Stuart Erwin and Marjorie Weaver in "The Honeymoon's Over."

SIGMA

James Stewart has helped popularize a new type of male screen star, the average, normal young American. His mail comes from fans of both genders and all ages. They like him because, as one sixteen-year-old wrote, "You're just like the boy next door."

"That is the nicest compliment that has ever been paid me," he said. "I happened to have selected a business that keeps me in the public eye. I like being an actor. But I have always hoped that being an actor would never change me as a person. I don't think it ever will."

Stewart never has followed any of the accepted Hollywood formulas. His friends are the same friends who shared his ambitions when he was a struggling young actor in New York not so many years ago. Henry Fonda, Burgess Meredith and Margaret Sullavan, who is his co-star in "The Shop Around the Corner," at the Sigma theatre. He never did like formal clothes and still doesn't. He never can keep his hair slicked down. He gets a kick out of playing the accordion, building model airplanes and photography. He's never been married but expects to some day when the right girl comes along.

Stewart rings as true as his background. He was born and reared in the town of Indiana, Pennsylvania, which has a population of 7,500. His father ran the town's hardware store, was a reasonably prosperous citizen and served his country meritoriously as a captain in the World war. Stewart was a Boy Scout, blew up the basement of the family residence with a chemistry experiment, liked to tinker with radio and other gadgets and went to Princeton because it was his father's university. During summer vacation, he clerked in the hardware store and for amusement assisted an amateur magician, Bill Nell. At Princeton, he was a leading member of the Triangle club, the university drama society, and met the friends who later influenced him in selecting the stage as a career.

OHIO

Headed by Clark Gable and Joan Crawford, who deliver two of the strongest characterizations of their film careers, an "all-name" cast of epic proportions makes "Strange Cargo" one of the thrilling experiences of the year. The film is now at the Ohio theatre.

Gable is seen as Verne Andre, convict who escapes a South American penal colony, and Miss Crawford as Julie, a cynical cafe entertainer who is forced to join him in his flight. With them are a crew of desperadoes consisting of Paul Lukas as the wife-murderer, Hessler; Albert Dekker as the Cockney safe-cracker, Moll; J. Edward Bromberg as the fear-ridden Flaubert; Eduard Ciannelli as the deluded Telez and John Arledge as the weakling, Dufond. With them also is a mysterious stranger with a Bible, Cambreau, played by Ian Hunter, who subtly influences the lives and deaths of all around him.

In addition to this outstanding cast, all of whom turn in unforgettable performances, Peter Lorre contributes a memorable portrayal as the repulsive libere, Monsieur Pig; Victor Varconi is humbly simple as the fisherman who must aid the survivors of the escape; Frederick Worlock blends justice with understanding as the prison governor, Grideau; and Bernard Nedell scores as Marfeu.

Frank Borzage, directing, has blended thrilling melodrama with a compelling spiritual theme, and Joseph Mankiewicz, producing, has been unsparing in the achievement of richly effective backgrounds and atmosphere. "Strange Cargo" is one of the film industry's unique attainments.

QUILNA

To forsake glamour is a pleasure, Dorris Bowdon insists.

Hollywood's most promising young actress came to this conclusion when she was offered the part of Rosasharn in "The Grapes of Wrath," John Steinbeck's widely heralded best-seller, which is currently presented at the Quilna theatre.

Ever since the day she first decided to become an actress, Dorris has wanted to play down-to-earth parts. After reading Steinbeck's stirring story, she saw the opportunity for a dramatic triumph in the part of the young wife who struggled so poignantly to bring life into the world.

"When I heard Mr. Zanuck had chosen me for the part I was the most amazed and excited girl in Hollywood," Dorris declared.

It was no task at all for Dorris to wear the formless cotton dresses and battered shoes. She gladly consented to having blue lights shot into her eyes to "black out" their natural sparkle and not once did she even attempt to powder her nose.

But playing Rosasharn was no simple matter of giving up frills, Dorris pointed out.

"Rosasharn roughed it along with the rest of the Joads, and believe me when the Joads roughed it, they roughed it," Dorris explained. "Director John Ford didn't let us off easily when it came time for us to follow their example."

Henry Fonda is seen as Tom Joad, Jane Darwell as Ma Joad, John Carradine as Casy, the preacher, Charley Grapewin as Grampa, Russell Simpson as Pa, O. Z. Whitehead as Al, John Qualen as Muley, Eddie Quillan as Connie and Zeffie Tilbury as Granma.
