Producer Hal Roach asked for the information in connection with a picture he is making. Prof. James R. Martin of the geology department suggests that the noise of the mud-turtle and aligator be magnified for the picture.

He says that the vocal organs of prehistoric monsters did not fossilize when their skeletons did and that it is therefore impossible to determine what sounds the animals would make. He says, however, that mud-turiles, snakes and alligators are the nearest approach to Tyrannosaurus and Dimetrodons in our civilization.
