N. Y. Stadium Concerts to Be Aired

Portions of the famous New York stadium concerts, in their 23rd season as one of the music world's leading summer outdoor events, will be broadcast for the sixth year over WBBM and the nation wide Columbia network at 7:30 p. m. Tuesdays beginning July 2. The orchestra, as always, will be that of the New York Philharmonic - Symphony society, whose Sunday concerts during the winter at Carnegie hall have been an exclusive CBS feature for the past decade. Alexander Smallens is to direct the opening program, details of which will be forthcoming. Among other conductors scheduled during the season are Efrem Kurtz, Massimo Freccia, Frieder Weissman and Hans Wilhelm Steinberg.

Besides broadcasting the Tuesday night events in this country, Columbia also will short-wave them in full over its international station, WCEX, beamed toward South

These concerts in the Lewisohn stadium of the College of New York were originated in 1918 with Arnold Volpe as the first conductor. They were designed as an experiment in ly to help entertain soldiers and sailors on leave during the World war. Columbia began broadcasting them in 1931 and 1932. Since 1937 the network has had exclusive radio rights to the concerts.

WILLIAM McCLOY

William McCloy, of the University of Wisconsin art education faculty, will explain why he uses masonite, a pressed wood product, for his pictures when he addresses the Wisconsin Allied Arts club Monday night.

The club has invited all persons interested in art to attend the meeting at 8 p. m. in the university art education bldg.

McCloy, who recently had a show at the Memorial Union, will explain and demonstrate the stages in painting his pic-

Jan Peerce Gives Concert July 19 at Union Theater

The first summer concert to be presented in the Wisconsin Union theater, by Jan Peerce July 19, should be a success, according to Ray Black, acting concert chair-man for the Union concert committee.

"Ticket sales have been brisk ever since the opening sale started," Black reported. "But we want to emphasize that the concert is open to all, Madison and out-of-town residents as well as summer school students.'

Mickey Mouse Proves His Honesty in Court Seven Dwarfs." Snow White HOLLYWOOD - (U.P.) had the voice of Adriana Caselotti and the body, as Walt Disney chalked up another $10,000,000 lawsuit in the "win" column Saturday drawn on celluloid, of Marand reiterated his intention jorie Belcher. So what happened? to battle-to the last Technicolor mouse-every such

Miss Caselotti sued in New York because some of the songs she sang had been transferred to phonograph records. She wanted a share of the phonograph profits. The judge threw that one out of court when Lessing prov-ed she had signed all, her rights in her performance to Disney every time she put her signature to her pay-check. She did that more than 30 times. That case hardly had been cleared from the docket be-fore the Ned Mann co. sued for an accounting of Snow White profits, charging that Disney had infiringed on pat-ents involved in the photo-graphing of Miss Belcher's lips. Mann charged further infringement in the manu-facture of "Pinnochio" and demanded an accounting of profits of more than $10,000,-000. Federal Judge Harry A. Hollzer ruled that Mann hadn't established his point and dismissed the case.

That leaves Disney with only a couple of dozen sints concerning Snow White. One was filed by a Californian because he claimed one of the dwarfs used his laugh, or an exact imitation. Most of the other suits have to do with songs in the picture. One woman litigant admitted that Disney hadn't copied her words, or music, but had infringed on the spiritual feeling of her work.

"There's a plague of these song cases," Lessing said.

"We also have a couple more patent against company. patent actions coming. The trouble seems to be that almost everybody sees one of his brain children somewhere in Disney's cartoons. I'remember one suit wherein an author charged plagiarism. It developed that we'd gone to Aesop's Fables for the story involved. So did the author who sued.

files." Disney's troubles in court began a dozen years ago, about the time Mickey Mouse, Pluto and Horace Horse Collar became household characters. "We woke up one day to discover that one of the big biscuit companies in Chicago was using our characters for its animal crackers," Lessing said. "We told 'em to stop; that we had federal copyrights. The Biscuit peo-ple came back and told us we'd better watch our own step. It said it had registered Mickey, Pluto, and Horace as animal crackers in all the 48 states.

"So we had to sue the biscuit people. There is a ruling that a copyright owner can collect one dollar for every infringement. We estimated as best we could the number of animal crackers baked by this concern and sued—for $24,000,000."

The biscuit people promised then to use plain, old-fashioned animals for their crackers, and Lessing settled out of court for around $5,-000, his legal costs.

"And ever since we've been sued for one thing or anoth-er," he said. "We've elected to fight every case and we've never lost a one. You'd think that the people who sue would begin to catch on that we think up all our own ideas and that we're prepared to prove it."
