ney Hillman, member of the national defense commission in charge of labor problems and labor training, is discussing with government heads the part the CCC will play, it is indicated.

Already, the work of the CCC is greatly expanding, officials state further. Soon 63 central motor repair shops will be ready for use. Men from CCC camps are taking courses at the repair shops and are turning into "first class auto-mechanics, Members of the CCC, too, are studying everything from radio communications to cooking that might be helpful for "home defense," officials declare.

rote new queen and step out.

Into normal life.

Probably the most interesting part of her year as dairy queen has consisted of the incidents occurring daily. at the milk stand she operates under state supervision in the capitol at Madison. Here, she says, she has met a variety of persons who stop, buy some milk or other dairy product, and ask many questions. For example, there is an elderly man who stops at the stand and tells how he makes jewelry boxes from matches. There is the veteran sailor who says "God bless you" after making his pur-

A group of South American dairymen once stopped at the stand and wanted Miss Vinger's picture so they could show it to their dairy women when they returned to their country. Their native dairy women, the South Americans said, were "lazy." The capitol guides, she said, have furnished flowers for her

Badger Farmers Reap Profits From

Wool Price Boom Wisconsin farm prices of woo this year are the highest since 1937, according to the crop reporting ser-vice of the Wisconsin and United States departments of agriculture,

Price reports for June show the average price of wool sold by Wisconsin farmers was 30 cents a pound compared with 24 cents a year ago. The wool price has ranged from 27 to 30 cents since October of last year.

Wisconsin farmers sell about three million pounds of wool anher a few pointers on sales the state brought Wisconsin farmers about $642,000. It is believed that about the same number of sheep were shorn in the state this year but the cash income will be considerably larger with the in-crease in prices compared with a vey as to possible damage to nesting birds as a result of unusually heavy rains recently. W. F. Grimmer, superintendent of game management, says early hatched pheasants probably escaped severe losses but rising waters may have brought considerable damage in the case of late nesting birds.

Heavy rains have meant wellfed fish, B. O. Webster, superintendent of fisheries, says, as much food was washed into lakes and streams. One angler reported to him that he caught a trout stuffed with angle worms: Excessive moisture drove the worms to the surface and then washed them into the streams.
