

Radio News and Programs

Marion Shockley will hear herself as others hear her when she gueststars in the role of Carol Carroll, beautiful young actress, on "Manhattan at Midnight" over the NBC-Blue network, Wednesday, Aug. 7. The copper-haired star will play a young stage performer who learns about dramatics, and love, from a dramatic critic. The supporting cast will include Helen Dumas, Lawson Zerbe, John Brown and Cliff Carpenter.

Public Leaders Help Radio Stars Celebrate Today at World's Fairs

Radio headliners will join with public leaders and organizations tonight in observance of "Broadcasting Day" at the San Francisco and New York World's fairs.

The program, called "This Is Radio," will include a message from President Roosevelt, to be read by Stephen Early, his secretary.

The broadcast will be carried in this area by WIBA, WBBM, WGN, WTMJ, WMAQ, WCFL, WLS, WLW, WJJD, WCCO, and others.

Participants representing radio will include:

Discussion

9 p. m.—People's Platform (WCCO): banker, manufacturer, economist, attorney discuss finance for defense.

Variety

7 p. m.—Barn Dance (WLS): Vass family, Andy Andrews, Hoosier Hot Shots, Henry Burr, others.

Riggs Has No Killer Instinct

By JACK GUENTHER

United Press Staff Correspondent

NEW YORK—When Bobby Riggs was a small boy his mother never had warned him not to play with matches. If she did, he didn't heed the advice. Because today, at 24, Riggs continues to play with his matches—tennis matches—and he finally has been burned by Frankie Kovacs.

For a boy who has been forced to struggle continually for the things he has wanted, the cocky little Californian singularly lacks what we shall call the killer instinct, that peculiar ability to put away an opponent in the least possible time.

Of course his game is partly to blame for that. It never has been a game of brilliant individual shots, blistering serves or dynamic action. Its strong points were rather stubbornness and a sort of latent shrewdness.

But with Riggs the complete absence of viciousness goes deeper than his game. It is almost psychological. Call it laziness, showmanship, or playfulness, the diminutive national amateur king has pegged his career on the simple process of muddling through. He refuses to play a single stroke better than he is forced to, and he seldom manages to defeat obscure players by any larger point margin than he whips the best of the internationalists.

This observation has been proven several times in the past week. At Seabright, Riggs was in trouble half a dozen times. At Southampton, he barely scraped through Edward Allco, who isn't a great tennis player even to his girl friend.

"Riggs' defeat by Kovacs Friday generally was considered an upset, but to many observers it came as no surprise. The singles king has been in serious trouble several times in the past week and on each occasion his difficulties could be traced directly to his apparent reluctance to play his best game in the first few sets.

"In early matches he barely scraped through Edward Allco. Riggs was down, 2-5, in the final set before he pulled his seams together, and lucked out 21 of the next 23 points and with them the match. Thursday he again was forced to come from behind to eliminate Henry Prusoff. Friday he ran against Kovacs—an opponent was just as stubborn as himself—and out he went."

This habit of coasting is not a new one. Riggs was like that in the beginning. Years ago, when he was just one of five tough Riggs brothers in the tough Lincoln Heights section of Los Angeles, he was coming then—because he would lapse then—because he was more stubborn and could play best when stroking out of deep water. It was on such stuff as this that he built his reputation, and once he became a champion he didn't change his methods.

The trait wasn't a serious one in the early days. But even in the last national, at Forest Hills, Riggs failed to win a single match without being forced into an extra set or extra games. Granted, he has proven his talent and his ability. Despite his lack of height—and that is a disadvantage not to be minimized—he won at Wimbledon and won at Forest Hills. This year there will be no Wimbledon, but if you are looking for a winner at Forest Hills, you again may take Riggs.

It is probable that he won't let you down. Yet, a champion is not supposed to waste time or strokes in practice or idleness once he faces an opponent across the net. Budge, Perry, Vines, Tilden—these men never trifled away time in the lower steps of the brackets. They crushed their opposition early and relentlessly so that they could concentrate on more exacting matches. This is a trick Riggs apparently has not learned.

He must learn soon because he no longer has the advantage of youth. The other front runners are just as young as he or younger. And as each day passes he can less afford to dissipate strength on the soft touches. He should be intent on sweeping them out of the way—as fast and as furiously as possible, and showmanship be damned.

A champion within a point of defeat in a minor match is dramatic. He thrills the grandstand and if he can extricate himself from an extremely disadvantageous position—as he did against Allco—he provokes vigorous and prolonged applause. But if the champ doesn't extricate himself, then he is just another spectator for the remainder of the tournament. And at Forest Hills the tournaments come along just once each year.

Richland Center Drops 17-6 Verdict to Cleveland Club

RICHLAND CENTER—The Cleveland Bears colored team trounced Richland Center's semi-pro nine here Friday night, 17-6, with a 21-hit attack. Except for a 2-all tie at the end of the first inning the Bears led all the way. George Lanphear and Ossie Swinehart divided the home team's pitching and also led its hitting. Lanphear poled a sixth inning home run with one on. Swinehart clouted out two hits, one a double.

Richland Center battles Adams in a Scenic Wisconsin League game here Sunday night in the first game of a doubleheader. The Richland Center clubs play Viola in the second game. Score by innings:

Cleveland..... 230 105-0-21 2
Richland Center..... 202 100-6-10 5
Batteries: Ellis and Turner; Lanphear, Swinehart and Craig.
Summary: Home run—Lanphear. Three base hits—Wood (C); Two base hits—Bake and Turner (C); Swinehart (R). Struck out by Lanphear 3, Swinehart 2, Ellis 3. Bases on balls—Off Lanphear 4, Swinehart 1, Ellis 2. Hits—Off Lanphear 14 in 5 innings, Swinehart 7 in 3.

Sunday movies for soldiers is being urged in Scotland.
