UNCLE RAY'S CORNER • By Uncle Ray

Hard Help Helped Make Newton Better Student
When Galileo died in Italy, the world lost one of the great minds of all time. Perhaps we should not say he was "lost," since his work and ideas lived on. Yet he no longer could add to the progress of mankind. Someone else was needed to lead science to new success.

The death of Galileo took place in January, 1642. In that same year—on Christmas Day—a baby was born in a village in England. He was a little fellow, this baby, weighing only two or three pounds.

There was fear that the tiny infant would die, but his mother watched over him with utmost care. He was kept extra-warm, and the flame of life did not go out.

The babe was Isaac Newton. Although frail and weak in his first years, he was destined to have a long and important career.

Before his third birthday, Isaac was taken to the home of his grandmother to live. His father had died, and his mother had married again.

The grandmother proved a good guardian, and when the lad was old enough he was sent to school. In those days the relatives of children had to pay for any schooling which might be given. Most boys and girls did not even learn to read and write.

Isaac at first showed little promise as a scholar. He failed to listen to his teachers, and they felt that perhaps he was wasting his time at school.

Then, at about the time of his 13th birthday, something happened to Isaac which changed his outlook. A larger and stronger boy struck him a hard blow.

Isaac was angered, and thought about the matter. "I cannot fight him back," he said to himself, "but I can work hard at my studies and show that I am better than he is."

When the boy put his mind to work, he quickly mastered his lessons. Before long he became the leader of his class.

Isaac not only won honor at school but also showed a thirst for knowledge for his own sake. When not in the classroom, he often carried a book about to read when he had a spare moment. Now and then he might have been seen seated under a tree, deep in a book, instead of finishing an errand.
