Christman Is Missouri Valley's Best

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — (U.P.) — Paul Christman of the University of Missouri was named the most valuable football player in the Missouri Valley area today by the Quarterbacks' club of the Kansas City Athletic club.

Christman will be given the award at a dinner here next Saturday night at which talks will be made by Major Lawrence 'Biff' Jones, coach of the Big 7 champions and Rose Bowl contestant Nebraska Cornhuskers, and Chet Benefield, coach of Tulsa university's Missouri Valley Conference champions.

Other players who received votes were Walter Luther, Warren Allison, Herman Rohrig, and Harry Hopp of Nebraska; John Knolla, Creighton, and Mel Ausiker, St. Louis university.

Tuesday night, at Columbia, Mo., they hung up Christman's number 44 football jersey with other symbols of Missouri athletic glory and the athletic department decreed that no other Tiger grid man shall ever wear that number.

Christman this year led the nation's passers in yardage gained by forward tosses and in the number of touchdowns passes completed with 13. He ranked behind John Knolla of Creighton and Tommy Harmon of Michigan in that order of yards gained from rushing and passing.

The United Press today placed Christman on its second All-American squad.

Badger Farmer Ignores Machine Age Charley, Oxen Stick to Old Ways

CHICAGO — (U.P.) — The machine age hasn't caught up with C. E. 'Old Charley' Ward. Tractors have displaced horses on many American farms, but on Ward's 640-acre Adams county, Wisconsin, farm teams of oxen still pull the plows. It's been that way for years — because Charley is 'a fool for luck' and prefers to rely on old fashioned methods.

Ward brought his team of seven-year-old oxen, a hulking pair of snow white Holsteins, to the 41st International Livestock exposition to pull a covered wagon around the arena where each night the world's best horses are on display and compete for riding and hauling honors, where buzzing tractors haul the harrow that smooths the dirt-floored ring.

Ward uses them for all the work draft horses would do on the homestead farm where he has lived his 74 years. They do the plowing, fertilizing, and cultivating and Ward reaps the harvests of alfalfa and corn. He also raises dairy cattle and hogs, but mostly he is proud of his oxen.

'Treat 'em well and feed 'em good and you can break a team in three days,' he said. 'They're worth every cent of it,' said Ward. 'They're better than horses any day.'
