

"Kitty Foyle" Will Start At Ohio Theatre On Saturday

Ginger Rogers Has Title Role With Dennis Morgan And James Craig In Masculine Leads

The first picture to glorify America's white collar girls, all 20,000,000 of them, comes to the Ohio screen Saturday in "Kitty Foyle," film version of Christopher Morley's best-seller with Ginger Rogers in the title role. Dennis Morgan and James Craig are starred in the masculine leads. Concluding a week's engagement at the Ohio Friday is "Love Thy Neighbor," with Fred Allen and Jack Benny in the starring roles.

Robert Young, Randolph Scott, Dean Jagger and Virginia Gilmore are the stars of "Western Union," currently at the Quilna theatre in the story of Edward Creighton, the telegraph builder who accepted the task of stringing the line thru from Omaha to Salt Lake City in the face of every conceivable danger. Jagger is cast in the role of Creighton.

Anna Neagle is the star of the current Sigma attraction, "No, No, Nanette," based on a successful stage musical. The glamorous star is supported by Roland Young, Richard Carlson, Victor Mature, Helen Broderick and Zasu Pitts. Stars of the co-feature, "Little Men," are Jack Oakie, George Bancroft, Sterling Holloway, Kay Francis and Johnny Burke.

Commencing Friday at the Lyric are two adventure films of first-class calibre, "Rangle River" with Victor Jory in the title role of a Western thriller, and "Leopard Men of Africa," showing for the last times Thursday at "Arizona," starring Jean Arthur and William Holden, and "Angels Over Broadway," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Rita Hayworth and Thomas Mitchell.

Reviewing the life of one of the greatest contributors to the speeding up of news, the State offers "Dispatch From Reuters," with Edward G. Robinson cast in the role of Reuters. Incidents which helped move Reuters to the top in the field of news gathering as well as his romance are told in the story of the fore-runner of the modern wire services. The co-feature is "Margie."

Raymond Massey's screen impersonation of the great Emancipator is offered at the Majestic theatre where "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" is now showing. The co-feature is "Texas Renegades."

OHIO
Fred Allen, who plays himself in the comedy "Love Thy Neighbor," now at the Ohio theatre, insisted all thru the making of the picture that they were distorting him into an entirely different character.

Slightly irascible, his nerves a little raw from his constant feuding with his co-star, Jack Benny, Allen pointed to the apartment the screen Fred Allen inhabits in the picture.

"This," he told Producer-Director Mark Sandrich, "looks more like Radio City than my own New York apartment. Yet, in the picture I am supposed to be myself living in New York. I am a man of simple taste. . . ."

"Simple tastes in a simple mind," hissed his antagonist, Jack Benny, who was listening to the conversation.

"If that snake Benny wants to hiss me and live," retorted Allen, "he'd better wear a sign that says, 'Don't Tread On Me.' I repeat, I am a man of simple taste. I have a small, but comfortable apartment in New York. I do not have 10-room suites complete with statues, knickknacks, bric-a-brac and a bevy of body servants. The Fred Allen friends who see Fred Allen impersonating Fred Allen will think that the real Fred Allen has gone Hollywood, or gone crazy—and I don't know which is worse!"

LYRIC
Victor Jory, who has the leading role in "Rangle River," commencing Friday at the Lyric, was born in Alaska while his parents were on a gold prospecting trip. When it was time to acquire an education his family moved to California where young Jory was enrolled at public school. His first ambition was to become a prizefighter but, after winning the amateur light-heavyweight crown of British Columbia, he tired of this and continued his education at the University of California. Then, after a period in the army, he turned to the stage and made his professional debut. For years he appeared in one-day shows, operettas and musical comedies, touring all over the states.

Arriving on Broadway he was an instant success in "Berkeley Square." A successful actor, he now turned to playwriting and produced the two plays, "Bodies By Fisher" and "Five Who Were Made."

While visiting Hollywood he was seen by studio scouts, given a test and instantly signed to a contract. Upon this terminating he was snapped up by Columbia for which company he has made "Party Wire," "Escape From Devil's Island," "Hell-Ship Morgan" and "The King Steps Out." More recently he starred in "Dodge City" and "Man of Conquest."

QUILNA
Made into one of the most thrilling adventure pictures of all time, Zane Grey's "Western Union" is now at the Quilna theatre. It has a superb cast headed by Robert Young, Randolph Scott, Dean Jagger and lovely Virginia Gilmore.

of the telegraph in the West by Edward Creighton. Dean Jagger plays the noted engineer who leads a wagon-train out of booming Omaha with distant Salt Lake City as the goal. Across prairie and plain where death strikes swiftly and silently as an Indian arrow, Creighton and his men fight onward against the savage Sioux.

Romance, action, Indians, adventure and all the excitement that was the frontier West have been deftly blended in "Western Union." The technical shots which were taken at Kanab, Utah, are especially brilliant.

Others featured in the superb cast of "Western Union" include John Carradine, Slim Summerville, Chill Wills and Barton MacLane.

SIGMA

Dramatic events at a peaceful little New England school in the post-Civil War era provide the action in "Little Men," now at the Sigma.

But where the book deals entirely with the school and its people, the producers of the film have back-tracked a few years to go into the antecedents and upbringing of Dan, the orphan youngster who plays such an important part in the story. In doing so they created two new characters, Major Burdick and Willie the Fox, who act as Dan's proxy fathers and who furnish much of the comedy of the picture.

For the rest, however, the action closely follows Miss Alcott's beloved tale, with Aunt Jo, Professor Bhaer, Nan, Teddy, Old Silas and even the cow, Buttercup, all involved in the dramatic and human story. Kay Francis and the new "find," Charles Esmond, portray Aunt Jo and her professor-husband Jack Oakie and George Bancroft are seen as the new characters, Willie and the Major, Young Jimmy Lydon plays Dan.

"Little Men" also features "Elsie," the acting cow, in an important role along with such well-known players as Ann Gillis, Richard Nichols, Sterling Holloway, Johnny Burke and Sammy McKim.

Romance and song hits and dancing and gay action are combined in "No, No, Nanette," Anna Neagle's latest vehicle, the co-feature. The vivacious star is supported by such favorites as Roland Young, Richard Carlson, Victor Mature, Helen Broderick and Zasu Pitts.

Marines taking parachute jumping lessons at the Lakehurst, N. J., naval air station come down to earth as other 'chutists watch from the ground. Fifty-five marines gave a demonstration of "static-line" parachute jumping from transport planes. In this form of jumping the parachute is attached to the plane by a rope and opens automatically as the 'chutist clears the ship. The men were part of a group of 80 now in training at the station.
