"Didn't you ever see Dykes play?" Miller retorted. "He was a chester. He played every ball off his chest. He knocked it down that way and then picked it up and threw his man out. But if he had a trio of Dykes boys in the outfield, that surely would make a tragic sight. They'd even break the heart of a pitcher like Feller chesting those fly balls into extra base hits."

"So you think the eight Dykes with a quartet of Fellers would be licked by the eight DiMaggios even with Altrock pitching?" "Yeh, I know it," Miller replied. the Imperial softball league lead "The Fellers could pitch perfect

Everything else about him has worn out —his arm, his legs and his eye but he talks better now than ever. Or at least he talks louder and longer. And that's a funny thing too because when I played with him at Atlanta 22 years ago he wouldn't open his trap. I'll bet he didn't say two words all season unless he was spoken to. 1 guess he's making up for lost time.
