FDR to Salute Labor Day in OEM Broadcast Monday

Les Tremayne and Barbara Luddy, stars of Columbia network's "First Nighter," transfer from the tender of Chicago's Columbia Yacht club to the Tremayne sailing sloop for a day on Lake Michigan. Les and Barbara must broadcast all summer—get their vacation in snatches. The Yacht club landing is only five minutes from the CBS studio.

President Roosevelt will head a list of speakers saluting Labor day on the air Monday. The president will speak during a program presented by the Office of Emergency Management over an NBC network. The broadcast will be carried by WIBA from 11 to 11:15 a. m. and from 11:30 a. m. to 12 m., and by WMAQ and WLS from 11 a. m. to noon.

Besides the president, participants will be Ernest Bevin, British minister of labor; Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management; William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; James Carey, executive secretary of the Congress of Industrial Organizations; Duke Ellington's orchestra; the Golden Gate quartet; Lowell Thomas, radio commentator; Melvyn Douglas, James Cagney, and Edward Arnold, of the movies; the U. S. Marine band; Barry Wood, singer, and the chorus of the International Ladies Garment Workers union.

Green will speak again at 2 p. m. over WENR, and Allan Haywood, of the CIO, will talk at 3 over WIBA. Gov. Dwight H. Green will give a Labor day address at 2:45 over WBBM.

Another special program will be a pageant, "These, Our Freedoms," in which 500 persons representing 42 nationalities will participate. It will be broadcast from Weirton, W. Va., over WMAQ at 7:30 p. m.

OPM Gives Priority to Truck, Bus Makers

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The Office of Production Management's priorities division Saturday issued a blanket order giving manufacturers of heavy motor trucks, medium trucks, trailers, and passenger busses, needed for defense priority ratings on all materials, in order to speed production.

War Cuts Imports, Boosts Prices, Demand for Musical Instruments

Trumpet tooters and saxophone serenaders will have a more expensive year ahead of them because the war has cut off nearly all musical imports.

The difficulty in getting musical instruments and supplies from European centers will mean—

Fewer low-priced brass instruments, formerly made in Europe.

More expensive reeds for all woodwinds.

A depleted stock of second-hand instruments.

Slightly higher prices on all grades of domestic instruments.

One of the few importers in the United States still receiving shipments of valuable French reeds for clarinets, saxophones, oboes, bassoons, and similar uses is Kilment Honeycombe, head of a Madison company which keeps secret its method of obtaining such shipments.

Reed Prices Jump

The reeds Honeycombe gets are from the province of Var, in unoccupied France. They are made from Frejus cane, raised carefully for nearly 15 years before it reaches maximum satisfaction. Frejus cane is the best in the world for instrument reeds, Honeycombe declared.

"There are some cane growers in California now, but their products are pretty awful," he pointed out. "Probably they're not letting their plants grow long enough before cutting them."

Ordinary clarinet reeds are up about a nickel apiece higher now than they were a year ago. Oboe and bassoon reeds are selling for $1 apiece, but there are none made in the United States. An imported wood clarinet, sent here from France, has advanced from $63 to $90 in price in a year.

French oboes the Madison company used to list at $216 now retail for $310, and bassoons which formerly sold for $260 now cost $415.

"And there'll be more price rises as the war goes along and supplies become smaller," Honeycombe predicted.

Where to Next Year

In the second hand instrument lines, he said leading musical supply stores all over the country—in cities other than Madison—have "raided" the pawn shops, to get the best of the used equipment there. What's left is either obsolete or "so cheap it's worthless."

The trouble with production is that even in peace times, American manufacturers couldn't care for all the business. Today, with almost stopped exports, with limitations on the amount of brass they can get, with almost no more cork available—"well." Honeycombe commented, "after this year's business is over, I don't see where there'll be anything at all left."

James Peshak, a retail musical instrument and supply salesman, saw a slightly brighter picture. The large national manufacturing firm supplying his firm put allotments on the supplies the Madison company may purchase — last year's amount plus 30 per cent—but is reporting no particular shortage of raw materials.

Copper Trumpet Bells

In first line trumpets, the prices have advanced not more than $5 to a range of $97.50 to $142.50. In saxophones, the price has risen about 10 per cent to $136 to $250. In clarinets, the increase is about 15 per cent, to a $115-$200 range.

A new development of the last year has been the seamless, electroplated bell for trumpets, made of copper, instead of brass. Manufacturers worked on it for years until one company finally succeeded in 1940.

School of Music Starts Registration This Week

After a five week vacation period, Elizabeth Beuhler, director of the Wisconsin School of Music, announced Saturday the reopening of the school for registration this week.

Individual lessons will begin Monday, Sept. 8, and some of the juvenile classes will be running on schedule beginning that day. However classes in beginning piano will be forming for several weeks as all group-work is arranged according to the ages of the pupils and new groups combine until all applicants for group-training are suitably placed.

The various juvenile string quartets will resume their lessons Sept. 8, and new groups will be arranged later.

Classwork for the advanced pupils who are working for their diplomas will not begin the first day, but will be announced for final schedule later. Some evening classes will be held for adult students who are occupied regularly during the day, but wish to continue their study. Arrangements for enrolment in these classes is desired as early as possible so that final hours may be decided.

Members of the faculty for the coming year are: Elizabeth Buehler, Alexius Baas, Esther Barden, Benn Carswell, Marie Endres, Olive Endres, Leola Gardisky, Bobye Hanesworth, Henry Herreid, Wayne Hugoboom, Stella Kayser, Lydia Luraas, Lorraine Miller, Helen Neal, Lucille Olson, Margaret Otterson, Dr. Sigfrid Prager, Idelle Strelow, Melvin Schneider, George Schafer, Elizabeth Statz, Bernice Swift, Jennie Taylor, Florence Vollstedt, Siegfried Vollstedt, Adelaide Vroman, John Warren, and Gladys Willett.
