SONS AND SAILOR DAD

When Clarence Lloyd Patten, 52, donned his uniform after being sworn in as a navy enlisted man, he got hearty congratulations from his seven sons, all serving on the U. S. S. Nevada, to which he himself was assigned. Beneath the ship's big guns are: (left to right) back row, Clarence, Myrre, Allen, Gilbert, Ray; front row, Bruce, the elder Patten and Marvin.

RAID SHELTERS AND SANDBAGS DOT REYKJAVIK

Iceland's Capital Is Teeming With Army Traffic As Defenses Rise

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Sept. 12 (UP)—This city, in the year of British occupation, has become a wartime capital, with many of its buildings sandbagged, its streets jammed with army lorries and its limited harbor facilities strained to the utmost.

Docks, formerly used only by fishermen and small vessels plying between Iceland and Europe, are piled high with food stocks and other war supplies.

Adding to the obvious signs of war are the wrecks of numerous vessels pulled up on the beach or lying on their sides in shallow water. Some were wrecked in the tremendous gales which sweep Iceland. Of one, only the forward half remained. It had been torpedoed a few miles off Iceland, skinned cleanly in two. Water-tight bulkheads kept part of the hull afloat and it had been towed in for salvage.

SCENE LIKE WATERCOLOR

Standing in from the sea, the first impression of Reykjavik and its harbor is of a huge watercolor, with low, white buildings glowing in the sun and etched sharply against the blue-green of the mountains behind and on each side.

The narrow streets follow the pattern laid down nearly 1,000 years ago, crooked and seeming to cut in on one another without plan.

Because Iceland has no trees and thus no lumber of its own, office buildings and homes almost universally are built of stone or concrete. The tallest is six stories. The Parliament building is of two stories, presenting much the same appearance as a country school in the United States.

On a diagonal across from the Parliament building is the broadcasting station, most modern of the buildings in Reykjavik. Across the city square from the broadcasting station is the Hotel Borg, the city's principal hostelry. Reykjavik, because of the pro-teeting gulf stream, has a comparatively mild climate, subject, however, to frequent changes and heavy fog. One resident told me that last winter the city had no snow and little if any frost.

LONG DAYLIGHT HOURS

In mid-summer daylight is 20 hours long.

Sidewalks of the business section of Reykjavik were torn up prior to the German occupation of Denmark. Iceland's then sister democracy, to make way for steam pipes which were to furnish heating to the entire city from nearby hot springs.

The plan since has been abandoned temporarily because iron pipes which were to have been obtained from Denmark were cut off by the occupation. Dirt was thrown back into the trenches but the concrete never restored. As a result the walks, like the streets,
