Character Actor Finds His Literary Efforts Failed To Get Him Job

By FREDERICK C. OTHMAN

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 10-(UP) -There is a new matinee idol in this town, with enough masculine comph to make any lady googleeyed, but we'll tell about him later; first we've got to report about the boredom of the weil known character actor, Willard

He was playing the part of a mormon elder in "Brigham Young" a few months back and there wasn't anything to do of an evening on location except play poker. He didn't like poker. So he went to his cabin and wrote himself a book, titled "Moon Tide."

It was a good yarn. A New York firm published it. Then 20th Century-Fox bought it. This was double good fortune because Author Robinson had included in his story a fat acting part for Actor Robinson. So what hap-

The studio hired Claude Rains. Now for the man with the comph. He is Jean Gabin, the leading movie star of France, and a husky, square-jawed he-man if ever there was one. He's had his troubles too. Boy!

For the first two years of the war he was a deck swabber on a French mine sweeper. Came the fall of Paris and the Germana offered him a big salary to keep on making movies, with maybe a little pro-Nazi propaganda in 'em. Gabin turned that offer down and after some fancy finagling in Vichy, got a permit to leave France. He came to America, not as a refugee, mind you, but in response to one of the insistent offers from the Hollywood movie makers. That was eight months

He started to study English, of which he knew not one word, and then the picture went into produc-tion with a celebrated German artisan for director. The German director was a top man, all right but he just barely could make himself understood to an American And there he was trying to tell Gabin, who could understand nothing, how to make love to Ida Lupino. This went on for nearly a month, or until everybody went

At the hair-tearing stage the studio replaced the German with the easy-going Archie Mayo and this afternoon all hands were at work and happy.
