Chapter a Day In recent months The Virginian, Dodsworth, and So Big have been presented. At 9 o'clock Gerald

Bartell reads A Chapter a Day which this program already has is token not only of a pleasing reading voice but excellent judgment which Bartell uses in his book selection. It is not done at random.

Although I had finished That 1, 4:20, 7:40, and 11; "Foreign Correspondent" at 2:20, 5:40, and Was Alderbury just before he started to read it on the air, I spent several very delightful half hours listening to it. Just now Thursday's Child is the choice for a Chapter a Day. After the dusting is finished we can again relax and mend as we listen to The Book Shelf at 10:30 over WSUI (910). The new books, the ones every one is talking about, are selected and interpreted by Alberta E. Martin of the WSUI staff, and a graduate
