

Greta Garbo Star Of Film Due At The Ohio Saturday

Melvyn Douglas, Constance Bennett And Roland Young Also Have Leading Roles In Comedy, "Two-Faced Woman"

The talent for comedy revealed recently by Greta Garbo reaches a new high in the brilliant actress' latest appearance, in "Two-Faced Woman," in which she is starred with Melvyn Douglas...

Joan Blondell, Binnie Barnes and Janet Blair form the engaging trio of "Three Girls About Town," commencing with the Friday preview showing at the Quilna theatre...

Ralph Byrd and Veda Ann Borg have the leading parts in "Duke of the Navy," the current lyric attraction, now being offered with the exciting story of the west, "Man from Montana," Johnny Mack Brown...

The tropical breezes are warming things up at the State where "South of Tahiti," starring Brian Donlevy, is the current hit.

Douglas made his appearance opposite the Swedish star in "As You Desire Me," and subsequently became the man who made Garbo laugh in "Ninotchka."

In the new picture he is instrumental in making her do a number of other unexpected things, among them, dancing a rumba, singing, discarding her famous long bob for an ultra-modern hairdress, and appearing in a bathing suit for the first time on the screen.

Douglas' role in "Two-Faced Woman" is that of a philandering young publisher who meets a lovely ski instructor (Garbo) at a winter resort. They fall in love and marry, but when Douglas is called back to New York on business he forgets his wife in the interests of a seductive authoress, Constance Bennett.

Together with Miss Bennett, the cast of "Two-Faced Woman" features Roland Young, last seen in the "Tanner" films, Robert Sterling, given his most important assignment as a young actor who is smitten by Garbo, and Ruth Gordon, the noted Broadway stage star.

SIGMA Gangsters are now heroes. And with the full consent of the Hays office, too, which has heretofore decreed that the screen should glorify no criminal at the expense of the law.

In "All Through the Night," mystery-comedy starring Humphrey Bogart and opening Saturday at the Sigma, retired gangsters and their mobs live to win the law's thanks and a closeup with their heart-throbs at the facade.

Stepping into hero roles is a new experience for Bogart and Barton MacLane. As ex-gangsters, who have gone into the gambling and night club racket, they clean up a nest of fifth columnists despite the law's efforts to pin a murder rap on them.

"Happy birthday to you, happy birthday to you—Number Seven Thousand Four Hundred and Two!"

treasure hunting expedition, "the general" is so convincing, that the sailors return to their ship and borrow two thousand dollars from their comrades in arms to finance the expedition.

When their fellow gobs see Byrd and Kruger embarking on the treasure hunt with the glamorous Miss Borg, they begin to smell a rotten deal, but it is too late to do anything by this time.

However, by pure dumb luck, the boys do discover an ancient pirate treasure, and the general's accomplices make plans to do away with them. A thrilling battle in a plane above the ocean climaxes the film, which is solid entertainment no matter how you look at it.

Ralph Byrd, as Breezy, the fast talking gob with an idea a minute—all of them costly—comes thru with one of the best performances of his career. Veda Ann Borg is charming as the girl who is hired to pose as the "general's" daughter, and comes thru with a delightful performance.

Stubby Kruger, former Olympic champion, displays a flare for comedy, as Cookie, pugilistically inclined gob who never wins a fight.

Conrad Veidt, Peter Lorre and Judith Anderson are the compelling fifth columnists. Kaaren Verne starts out in their camp but ends up in the arms of Bogart.

Rivalry between an energetic newspaper reporter and a stuffy insurance salesman over the affections of a pretty secretary, is said to provide rollicking comedy in the gay romance, "Obliging Young Lady," also showing and featuring little Joan Carroll, Edmond O'Brien and Ruth Warwick.

QUILNA Speeding to unknown danger, the radio cops burn up the highways in a blaze of gun-fire in "The Officer and the Lady," which is opening on Friday evening at the Quilna theatre.

The new adventure film features Rochelle Hudson, Bruce Bennett and Roger Pryor in the leading roles. Supporting players include such favorites as Richard Fliske, Sidney Blackmer, Tom Kennedy, Oscar O'Shea, Joe McGuinn, Charles Wilson and William Hall.

A mad, romantic farce, "Three Girls About Town," will also be at the Quilna theatre Friday evening. New laugh records already have been set by Joan Blondell and her merry-making partners, Binnie Barnes, Janet Blair, John Howard and Robert Benchley.

LYRIC It's a toss-up between laughs and thrills at the Lyric theatre, where "Duke of the Navy" is now showing with Ralph Byrd and Veda Ann Borg in the leading roles. Both thrill fiends and comedy fans will get more than they bargained for in this film, the story of a pair of Uncle Sam's sea dogs, who are mistaken for a pair of wealthy society sailors, and set upon by "the general," a fake soldier of fortune, who hopes to swindle a non-existent fortune from Byrd, and his side-kick, Harold "Stubby" Kruger.

National Defense Will Be Theme On 'Wings Of Destiny'

Ruth Hussey Impaneled For "Information Please;" Lucille Ball To Swap Wisecracks With Herbert Marshall

National defense will be the theme of the Wings of Destiny program, heard on WEAF at 10 p. m. Friday. The program will be built around three terse statements: "The Seas are free, keep them that way"; "The land is free, keep it that way" and "The air is free, keep it that way."

Ruth Hussey is a pretty movie actress. Almost anybody knows, however, that it takes more than that to be impaneled on the "Information Please" board of experts. But Miss Hussey is up for the grand mental test of Friday, at 8:30 p. m., over WEAF, in such impressive company as John Kieran, Franklin P. Adams and Christopher Morley.

Lucille Ball, wisecracking blonde actress and a leading light of the current crop of Hollywood glamor girls, will make the first of three weekly guest appearances Friday on Herbert Marshall's show, featuring the comedy team of Bert Wheeler and Hank Ladd and songs by the Merry Maes. The program is heard at 8:00 p. m. over WJZ.

Kate Smith will move her entire "Variety Show" to Miami, Fla., to join Betty Grable, Jack Oakie and Lou Holtz for a special broadcast in connection with the Islands, Friday, over WABC at 8:00 p. m.

Maureen O'Sullivan, dark-haired colleen from Boyle, Ireland, who is one of Hollywood's most popular actresses, will put in a guest appearance on P. Ballantine & Sons comedy-variety
