raw northwest. James Cagney does some plain and fancy cloud busting in "Captains in The Clouds" at the Ohio theatre. As a hell-rider, this sassy little tough guy does a masterful 30b. Brenda Marshall contributes a heap of alure.

There's fightin' and fun aplenty in "Go West, Young Lady," now showing at the Quilna theatic. The action is supplied by Ann Miller, who is exceedingly fine to view; Glenn Ford and Charles Ruggles. Additional business is due to the presentation of "Honolulu Lu." featuring that Mexican spitfire, Lupe Velez.

A swell swing-fling opens today at the State with the showing of "Birth of the Blues." The incomparable Bing Cro.by is mighty melodic, in fact the whole cast is great in the groove. Second attraction is "Buy Me That Town."

One of the fastest moving horse operas seen in many days is offered in "Texas" at the Lyric active in picture work since 1934 theatre. Vic Chattem, who made possible the unusual deep-sea diving sequences for "The Blonde from Singapore," currently at the Lyric theatre, is probably the world's youngest professional underwater

Just 20 years old. Vic started diving when he was 12, at times neglecting his school classes to explore the undersea wonders. His equipment then, was decidedly improvised. For a "helthe youngster used a sawed-off end of a steam boiler, or a five-gallon gasoline can. Air was supplied him by schoolmates working an old bicycle pump. Vic would dive during recess, at lunch times, and every other chance he got. He rarely attended school in a completely dry suit of clothes.

Recognized as one of the country's greatest divers, he has been
