

Famous Detective Pair Will Be Seen In Sigma Feature

Technicolor Love Story Is On Screen At Ohio; Fonda And Bennett At Lyric; Withers Film Is At Quilna

Philo Vance and Sergeant Heath, famous detective characters, return to cinema life in the new Sigma feature, "The Kennel Murder Case" starting Wednesday. William Powell and Eugene Pallette are cast as the pair, while Mary Astor also has a starring role. Joel McCrea, Pat O'Brien and Barbara Stanwyck are the stars of the co-feature, "Gambling Lady." Showing for the last times Tuesday are "The Wolf Man" and the "Mad Doctor of Market Street."

Stirling Hayden and Madeleine Carroll are the stars of the current Ohio film, "Bahama Passage," a love story in technicolor making full use of the brilliant foliage of the tropical islands of the British West Indies. Others in the cast of the film are Flora Robson, Leo G. Carroll, Mary Anderson and Cecil Kellaway. "Wild Geese Calling," the new film at the Lyric theatre, stars Henry Fonda and Joan Bennett and is the enthralling story of the two-fisted lumberjack and his dance hall queen who together brave the elements of the great Northwest. Ona Munson, Warren William and Barton MacLane have prominent roles in the film. Co-featured is "Honolulu Lu," starring Lupe Velez, Leo Carrillo.

Jane Withers has one of her most romantic roles in the current Quilna film, "Young America," which deals with the 4-H clubs throughout the country and the splendid work which the rural youth are doing. Jane Darwell heads the supporting cast. Lloyd Nolan and Mary Beth Hughes appear in the co-feature, "Blue, White and Perfect."

The whistle brigade comes into its own in the current State film, "Sundown," in which Gene Tierney has the starring role, and is the cause of the whistles. George Sanders, Bruce Cabot, Harry Carey and Reginald Gardiner appear in prominent supporting roles. Jimmy Durante and Phil Silvers are the ha-ha boys of the co-feature, "You're In the Army Now."

LYRIC
The Lyric offers a superb motion picture from an outstanding novel. This is Stewart Edward White's great adventure story of the Northwest, "Wild Geese Calling," now showing.

Henry Fonda, as the two-fisted lumberjack with a love for the outdoors, gives the finest performance of his career, even surpassing his great portrayal of Tom Joad in "The Grapes of Wrath." And Joan Bennett, as Sally, the dance hall queen, is superb in an entirely new kind of role.

All the action, drama and romance of this fine story of the great Northwest, which was awarded the gold medal of the Commonwealth Club of California as the outstanding novel written by a resident of the state in 1940, has been retained in the film. The interesting story of wandering John Murdoch, played by Fonda, who meets and falls in love with Sally while looking for his friend Blackie has been faithfully followed.

Marrying Sally, John takes her to Alaska, not knowing that she and Blackie had been friends before he met her. Angry when he finds Blackie holding Sally in his arms, John assaults his friend, and leaves his wife, thus setting the stage for the unusual climax.

Excellent support has been given the two stars by the supporting cast which includes Warren William, as Blackie, Ona Munson and Barton MacLane.

For adventure, action and romance, be sure to see Stewart Edward White's "Wild Geese Calling."
