

New Double Bill Will Open On State Screen Thursday

"H. M. Pulham, Esq.," And "Wild Bill Hickok Rides" To Be Shown; Latest Andy Hardy Film For Ohio Fans

As our British war cousins would say, it a very "strategic bit of cinema plotting" is revealed in "H. M. Pulham, Esq." to be released Thursday at the State theatre. The casting is superior and for smoothness of presentation the bill is unbeatable. Especially since "Wild Bill Hickok Rides" is on the other 50 per cent of the program.

In the interim that bang-up tale of gang-disintegrating, complete with a Lana Turner turnout, entitled "Johnny Eager" plus the film "Don't Get Personal" shows for the last times Wednesday.

Turning out to be one of the most genuine pieces of adult film fare are the Andy Hardy series, of which the most recently released, "Andy Hardy's Courtship" is now at the Ohio theatre. Other pictures in the Quilna line are "You Belong to Me" and "You Belong to Me" which are being shown in the Rooney-starring films are enjoyable, sincere and constitute amazingly good theatre.

Choice episodes of hilarity crowd the Sigma screen with the premiere presentation in town of "Butch Minds the Baby" on Wednesday. Secondary hit is "This Was Paris," a nostalgic creation of singular attraction powers.

Excellent entertainment is available at the Quilna theatre where "The Shores of Tripoli" currently is displayed. The picture is as unassuming and heartening to see as are the stalwart Marine recruiting officers stationed in the Quilna lobby.

Two deftly dandies, "Moon Over Her Shoulder" and "You Belong to Me" swing across the Lyric theatre silver sheet Wednesday. A result of the war revival spirit is the latter production which stars Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda. Lynn Bari and that droll fellow, Alan Mowbray, are leads in the "Moon, etc." feature.

Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda, the lovable "Lady Eve" combination are again teamed in Columbia's newest comedy, "You Belong to Me," now at the Lyric theatre. A Wesley Ruggles' production, and based upon a screen play by Claude Binyon, "You Belong to Me" includes Edgar Buchanan, Roger Clark, Ruth Donnelly and Melville Cooper in its featured supporting cast.

Barbara Stanwyck has 12 ultra-modern wardrobe changes, designed by Edith Head, in Columbia's "You Belong to Me." She also wears one milk coat, insured for $8,000, during hilarious comedy scenes with Henry Fonda, co-star in the comedy.

One of Barbara Stanwyck's pet ambitions has been to take a sky-ride on one of the big camera booms, but no director has let her do it until Wesley Ruggles permitted her to ride the boom during a two-story dolly shot for this film, his newest hilarious comedy, "Moon Over Her Shoulder" also shows.

Maureen O'Hara has a temper, an Irish temper, a temper that has been known to blister steel. And while it takes a girl with that kind of temper to play her role in the Quilna's technicolor production of "To The Shores of Tripoli," there are times when her spirited performance calls for a durable chin. The one thing that brings said temper to a boil is a crack—any crack—about the Irish. Usually when thus provoked, she will pale, leave abruptly, run to her dressing room and slam the door.

On the set of "To The Shores of Tripoli," the Darryl F. Zanuck hit which is now at the Quilna John Payne, her co-star, began to tease her gently about the Ould Sod. Before Maureen could run to her dressing room, Director Bruce Humberstone called them into a scene.
