SADDLE RIVER, N. J.—(U.P.)— Farmer Herman Berghahn was despondent because he had not seen his son since Herman, Jr., was drafted three months ago. He went to one of the chicken coops. Saturday and rigged up an arrangement which permitted him to fire a rifle by poking at the trigger with a stick. His wife found the body at noon, into the house, Herman, Jr., returned home on his fire; furlough. 12:30 Daryl Harpa Orch.-WBBM

Through the Windshield

Wisconsin's 1942 official highway map is really new this year with the surfacing legend change to conform with federal regulations, with many new wayside and county parks shown, and with greater accuracy.

The war has had its effect

by Mac

here, too, for all reference to airports, seaplane bases, and military establishments has been eliminated at the request of the government.
Camp McCoy and Camp Douglas are shown as dots on the map because they have postoffices a those places, but there is no indication of any boundaries for any thing else which might be in the vicinity. The war influence is felt again in distribution, for while "almost as many" maps were ordered, "we're going to try to cut down on the number distributed," said Victor Riley, state highway commission draftsman. Man naper isn't too plentiful, you see. The map is even ahead of the road in one place, for while Highway 78 will remain open on the river between Merrimac and Prairie du Sac until the school bus quits running, the map has the highway relocated south and eas of the river, missing both Prairie du Sac and Sauk City, You won't find any signal or symbol for moving Highway 78, either. County seats are indicated for the first time, as are gravel, all-weather highways, which a year ago were combined with dustless, all-weather roads. And now you'll really have to get your specks on, for five types of county highways also are shown, and you'll have to look sharp if you want to get all the de-

The reverse side is unchanged, except for new pictures in the old layout, and a new message from Gov. Heil. Heil, by the way, reserved for himself the state's seal, and a highway commission emblem replaces it except with his greeting. He probably wrote of the military type than the the welcome himself, for it says: street signs we are used to.

"I have asked our good citizens to welcome visitors to Wisconsin with all the friendliness and hospitality for which our state is famous."

Wisconsin has its Burma road, too, a strip of so-called highway which doesn't have to be bombed to be a lot like the famed road into China.

Wisconsin's "Burma road" connects the former Civilian Conservation Corps camp at Devils Lake state park with a back door into the Badger Ordnance works site on the Sauk prairie, and has been named by powder plant work-

The road to the south shore of Devils lake is bad enough, with its sharp grades and sharper even worse. The powder plant officials put up a warning sign, so the town quit maintaining the road. It was bad enough before, but lack of maintenance hasn't improved it any.

How long the camp's fleet of light Studebakers will last bouncing over those holes we won't guess, but we were mighty glad 'Barney" Oldfield provided a US ear and his assistant to drive for our tour of the powder plant. Not many of you will have much opportunity to care, for the flocks of guards sort of discourage Sunday afternoon tours within the plant area, but roads within the works site are surprisingly good. When you consider that last week, or at the most two months ago, none of the roads was anything but field and pasture, you don't mind a bump or two now and then.

There are very definite speed imits within the plant area, and they are obeyed. The usual limit is 25 miles an hour, but in places it is 15. There are arterial and caution signs, but they are more marines stationed within the state boo flyrods with spinners, streamduring the war, but apparently nothing short of a legislative enactment and possibly even a constitutional amendment can open up to them the privilege of free hunting and fishing.

The matter has been discussed in connection with the army air corps and branches of training which will bring uniformed men to Madison. It was mentioned at the recreational conference held last week, when pro-posed facilities for entertain-ment of the boys were outlined.

But neither the conservation commission itself nor any official of the conservation department has any power to waive license requirements, which are statutory and speclfic.

The situation already has been considered by conservation of-ficials and Col. A. H. Smith, the departuent's legal counsel declares an exhaustive search of the statutes has failed to turn up even the timest loophole either to grant the boys free fishing privilege or the right to purchase resident licenses, unless they were Wisconsin men before entering service.

Even the legislature, in the unlikely event that Gov. Heil were ther downstream, the fishing was to call it into special session, would reported fairly good a few days be unable to hurdle the constitutional barrier in one sitting.

Article III, fec. 5, of the state constitution says:

tutional barrier in one sitting.

Article III, 'ec. 5, of the state constitution says:

"No soldier, scaman or marine in the army or navy of the United States shall be deemed a resident of this state in consequence of being stationed within the same.

Hence, unless somebody takes the responsibility of abrogating the statutes and the constitution, as proposed in the case of gaso-line tankwagon loads on the highways, soldiers and sallors from outside the state will have to pay the regular $3 nonresident license fee to fish in Wisconsin this summer.

A booklet prepared by N. R. Barger, Elton E. Bussewitz, Earl L. Loyster, Sam Robbins and Walter E. Scott of Madison for the Wisconsin Society of Ornithology lists 366 authenticated bird species found in Wisconsin. The booklet, containing a preliminary check list and migration charts, was published preparatory to a revised listing of the state's bird life. Corrections have been found necessary, it says, since publication of Kumlein and Hollister's "Birds of Wisconsin," in 1903, and Charles B. Cory's "Birds of Illinois and Wisconsin," in 1909.

M. F. Jamar, Jr., in Heddon Fish-Flashes, offers a bit of ad-

> In making your backcast, he suggests, bring the lure to the surface before the pickup, or you may break or strain the Tackle companies, he reports, are being swamped with repair this spring. Apparently many anglers, discouraged from thoughts of new equipment in the light of wartime limits on production, plan to get along with their old tackle this year. Anglers who propose to use flies on the opening day of the trout season were advised to get their lures down deep for brook trout, using a small split shot, if necessary, because brookies are lazier than either rainbows or browns in the spring.

Upper reaches of the pike migration waters in the Wolf river, ending at the Shawano dam, apparently yielded about four days of good walleye fishing after the season opening. Madison fishermen returning from Shiocton reported large catches were made Saturday, Apr. 18, but few were taken the next day, indicating the run had ended. At Fremont and elsewhere for ther downstream, the fishing was

longer. LEGAL NOTICES
