That's Gene Autry in "Home in Wyomin'," musical western now at the Lyric theatre. And we are happy to report that the phenomenally popular Mr. Autry is as tuneful, entertaining and altogether satisfactory as ever. If anyone questions the secret of Autry's popularity, let him but witness the pleasant, unassuming manner in which he portrays the ex-rodeo star who returns to his own outfit, when he learns it is NOT in trouble, to pull it back on its feet again.

When there is evidence of foul play behind the rodeo's impending downfall, Gene goes into action, and soon the plains resound with the gunfire of pursuing cowboys and fleeing villains.

Smiley Burnette and Fay Mc-Kenzie again headline the supporting cast. Smiley is his usual silarious screen personality, and Fay is lovelier than ever as the

An outstanding supporting cast includes James Seay, Chick Chandler, Forrest Taylor, Joe Strauch, Jr., George Douglas, Olin Howlin, Hal Price and James McNamara. William Morgan merits praise
