LYRIC

A private nurse knows the worst about the best people—and the best about the worst! She meets all kinds—gummen, wolves, rats and right guys!

And her dramatic, romantic and even amusing experiences are excitingly told in "Private Nurse," which is stated to open Thursday at the Lyric theatre.

The excitement starts when lovely, blonde Brenda Joyce is stranded in New York, alone and broke. As she is signing up at a nurses' registry in an attempt to find work, she hears a call for another nurse. Rushing out of the office, Brenda tries to grab the call, but is soundly scolded when the other nurse, played by Academy Award Winner Jane Darwell, shows up on the scene.

When she hears Brenda's story, Jane has pity on her. She gets her a position taking care of reformed gangster Sheldon Leonard's daughter. There she learns that the little girl, who is portrayed by Ann Todd, does not know her mother's identity.

Brenda accidentally learns who Ann's mother is, but she is warned by the father not to interfere in the affair. How she brings mother, father and child together again makes for a novel and exciting climax.

Robert Lowery and Kay Linaker are also featured in "Private Nurse."
