

Lloyd Nolan In Western Thriller At Sigma Theatre

East Side Kids Also Scheduled; Guy Lombardo And His Band On Ohio's Stage Friday

Lloyd Nolan, the sinister smoothie who is equally at home in the automatic-with-kid gloves drawing room type of thriller and with six-guns holstered at each side and forking a horse, shows starting Wednesday at the Sigma theatre. The vehicle is "Apache Trail." The film is strictly wild stuff with Indians and what not surging all over the place.

Second offering on the Sigma's new bill features the East Side Kids in "Smart Alecks." At the Ohio theatre preparations are going forward apace in making things right for the arrival of Guy Lombardo and his Royal Canadians come Friday. Billed as "the sweetest music this side of heaven" the internationally known Lombardos dish out considerable syrupy rhythms, definitely on the cloying and not hot side. Meanwhile the House of Hits presents those twin incendiaries, Lana Turner and Clark Gable in "Somewhere I'll Find You."

The Quilna theatre patrons are trekking in droves to see for the last time a pair of negative-titled dandies. They are "The Postman Didn't Ring" and "The Man Who Wouldn't Die." In the first film a mail sack, missing 50 years, is recovered by authorities. The action develops when the postal authorities attempt to distribute all the letters to their intended recipients or their heirs. The go-along specialty is a Mike Shayne thriller featuring Lloyd Nolan and a cute speck. "Talk of the Town" is previewed tonight.

Wallace Beery is back in the saddle again in the proffering of "Jackass Mail" at the State theatre. History is faithfully reproduced in the telling of how the gap was spanned between the pony express and the arrival of the railroad. Also showing is the tale of a hooper who danced to fame with a gun shoved in his back. The picture is "Broadway" starring Pat O'Brien and George Raft.

For stark goofiness, batted out by the battiest battalion that ever battled the blues, go see "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" at the Lyric theatre. Jackie Gleason and lovely Florence Rice are the prime ingredients. For the musical touch, Borrah Minevitch and his harmonica rascals do the business. Also playing a return engagement is "Women in War."

SIGMA
Leo Gorcey, talented young character actor and an especially tough member of the East Side Kids gang, never had a thought of a theatrical career until a casting director offered him a job. Tom his father was a well known stage actor, and expected to be a member of the Pipiferters' Union all his life. But one day, at parental request, he took his younger brother David to a tryout for boys hoping for an engagement in a new play called "Dead End," and the unexpected happened. The director passed over the younger boy, and offered Leo a job as one of the six tough young boys in the play. He took it.

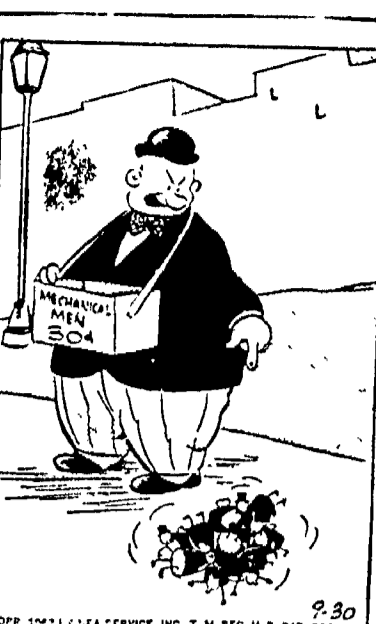

Gorcey comes to the Sigma theatre on Wednesday in "Smart Alecks," Monogram's East Side Kids picture in which he is starred with Bobby Jordan, Huntz Hall and Gabriel Dell, who were his companions in that same play of years ago. Important roles in the picture are also played by "Slapsy" Maxie Rosenbloom, Gale Storm, Stanley Clements and Roger Pryor. "Apache Trail" with Lloyd Nolan is the main event.

QUILNA
Cary Grant, Jean Arthur and Ronald Colman are starred in the exciting new romantic comedy, "The Talk of the Town," which opens Wednesday night at the Quilna theatre. The supporting cast includes Edgar Buchanan, Glenda Farrell and Tom Tyler. With so important a cast and behind-the-camera crew, "The Talk of the Town" naturally became one of Hollywood's favorite topics of conversation from the moment production started. When Hilmund finally saw the picture, "The Talk of the Town" immediately became the talk of the town! "Sneak preview" audiences outdid themselves in praising the performances of the stars, in applauding the masterful story and entertainment-wise direction. "The Talk of the Town," presenting its star trio with roles of equal and valuable merit, is re-

On the cinematic side, the Ohio offers the attraction "Halfway to Shanghai." Delectable Irene Hervey and Kent Taylor are the main attractions in this one.

LYRIC
From the thrill-dipped pen of David Hume comes "Death Cell," featuring James Mason and Margaret Viner. Adapted by Edward Dmytryk and John Argyle from Hume's successful novel, "They Called Him Death," the film is now at the Lyric theatre.

Dealing with the exciting adventures of Mick Carby, detective, the story concerns a group of American kidnapers in London. Sweeping from one situation to another, Mick becomes entangled in a maze of trouble. Tortured and left for dead in the hold of a burning barge, he recovers long enough to find himself again trapped in the horrible "death cell." With the aid of lovely Margaret Viner, he succeeds in running down his quarry as he prepares to turn them over to Scotland Yard.

"Death Cell" was produced by John Argyle and Lawrence Huntington directed. Also featured in the film are Mary Clare, Frederick Valk, Barbara James, Eric Clavering, Anthony Shaw and Viola Lyel. Also at the Lyric theatre is "Sons of the Pioneers," action western starring Roy Rogers. Playing in support to Roy in the picture are George "Gabby" Hayes, Maris Wrixon, Bradley Page, Hal Taliaferro, Forrest Taylor, and the popular songsters of the airwaves, the Sons of the Pioneers.
