

Colorful Story Of Sports Hero Is Offered At Ohio

Errol Flynn Provides Romance And Action In His Portrayal Of "Gentleman Jim"

A colorful story of one of the best known figures of the sporting world, "Gentleman Jim," is offered at the Ohio theatre commencing Friday.

Based on the experiences of a couple of female Watsons in Gotham, the new film at the Quilna, "My Sister Eileen," stars Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne and Janet Blair and opens Friday evening at the preview.

Probably one of his last pictures for the duration is Robert Taylor's "Cardboard Lover," now offered at the State theatre.

The current lyric film, "Men of San Quentin," is based on the experiences noted by a crime-reporter, who produces a realistic and human story of men behind the bars.

Director Raoul Walsh is tampering with history again. From the days when he made "The Big Parade" and "The Cockney" right up to such recent achievements as "They Died With Their Boots On," Director Walsh has always been willing to monkey with facts a bit to get more action.

Walsh has had an adventurous, exciting life and he makes his pictures the same way. Right now he has completed "Gentleman Jim" at Warner Bros., the film now at the Ohio theatre, and you'd imagine that a picture about James J. Corbett, world's heavyweight boxing champion, would have plenty of action in it.

The fight between Corbett and John L. Sullivan on September 7, 1892, won by Corbett by a knockout in the 21st round, is the climax of the picture. Walsh did a lot of research on the fight, and that's when he started changing history again.

"Too tame," said Walsh. "Why, Corbett in his own book admits the crowd booted and stamped and yelled for action. Maybe they didn't get it—but the crowd at the movie fight will."

And they did. More than 750 extras, clad in costumes of the 90's, cheered and yelled for more than two days while Errol Flynn, who plays Corbett, and Ward Bond, the Sullivan man, enacted the famous scene.

Check with history: when Mr. Walsh wants action, he gets it.

Based upon the uproarious Broadway comedy of two Columbus, Ohio, sisters, battling for their careers and their honor in the jungles of Manhattan's Greenwich Village, "My Sister Eileen" opens at the Quilna theatre Friday evening.

The film, starring Rosalind Russell, Brian Aherne and Janet Blair, is twice as lusty as the stage success, and 20 times as hilarious . . . no mean record for Excitement is in store for Don "Red" Barry fans at the Lyric theatre this week. "The Cyclone Kid," Barry's latest picture, which is now showing, a well-rounded out supporting cast includes such names as John James, Lynn Merrick, Alex Callan, Joel Friedkin, Slim Andrews, Rex Lease, John Merton and Monte Montague.

Barry plays the role of "The Cyclone Kid"—more formally known as Johnny Dawson—a professional "gun for hire" man who has operated all over the west and is now in the employ of "Big Jim" Johnson, unscrupulous cattle baron who objects to ranchers homesteading government land, which he has heretofore considered his own domain.

When Johnny's younger brother, Bill Dawson, appears in town unexpectedly, the Cyclone Kid's activities are considerably curtailed. Johnny does not want Bill to know that he is a gunman; he put Bill thru medical school with the proceeds from his gun, expecting him to remain in the east and set up practice.

But when Bill learns that Johnny is associated with Johnson and his gang, he repudiates him; Sullivan, a rancher, is killed in cold blood by Johnson's henchmen, and Bill openly goes over to the side of the ranchers. It is obvious to Bill that Johnson has "bought" all the so-called law enforcement agencies, and the trial of Sullivan's murderer is a travesty on justice.

Thus, with the two courageous Dawson brothers pitted against

Ruth and Eileen Sherwood come to New York for fame and fortune; Ruth wants to be an author, the eye-filling Eileen dreams of a stage career. They wind up in a basement apartment, whose big curtainless window at pavement level lets in the noise, the rowdies, the dogs and the cats and all the other gussy excitement of the Village. A lockless door lets in everybody else—including a "clairvoyant" who formerly did business at that address, a professional football player (unemployed) fleeing from his mother-in-law, a drug store manager who buys Eileen her lunch, a magazine editor who buys Ruth's stories, a Cossack night club doorman, and sundry other characters, as well as six members of the Portuguese merchant marine who follow Ruth home one night, are bowled over by Eileen and refuse to go home.

It is Eileen who decides to lead them to the street, by way of the conks, and it is Eileen who winds up in jail.

The east is superb, the direction flawless. "My Sister Eileen" undoubtedly rates among the 10 best comedies of all time.

DELPHOS VOTERS TO BALLOT ON 2 LOCAL ISSUES

(Lima News Bureau) DELPHOS, Oct. 30.—There will be two local issues on Tuesday's ballot of the general election which is expected to boost the total voting here.

The city is asking for a one and a half mill levy for operating expenses for the next five years. Curtailment of public services in some cases has already taken place, officials say.

The second issue is unusual. It asks the voters to say whether the municipality shall vacate a portion of N. Washington st., north of Tenth-st. If carried this will allow the Delphos Bending Co. to erect a loading platform on the site for the purpose of facilitating the shipments of war orders.

City council originally passed an ordinance to vacate the site. Opposition arose and with the rescinding of the ordinance the legislators passed a resolution authorizing the issue to be placed on the November ballot.
