

Famed Trumpet Stylist To Bring Orchestra To Ohio

New Hit Film Showing At Lyric; Quilna Offers Dramatic Picture Of War

Louis Prima, termed America's foremost trumpet stylist, will bring his famous orchestra to the Ohio theatre stage for four performances Tuesday.

Louis Prima, termed America's foremost trumpet stylist, will bring his famous orchestra to the Ohio theatre stage for four performances Tuesday.

Currently showing at the Sigma is "The Navy Comes Thru," a story which tells of America's fighting men.

Tuesday and Wednesday will be the final days for the showing of "You Can't Escape Forever" at the State.

Attracting huge crowds to the Quilna is "Manila Calling," a story dealing with America's first guerrilla fighters.

Laughter and romance in the face of emergency, in bustling wartime Washington, enliven what is literally the cross section of a woman's soul.

The story revolves about Mrs. Hadley, wealthy socialite, who when the war starts, tries, altho she is not unpatriotic, to live her life as before.

Miss Bainter handles the difficult role, with many delicate shades of characterization, with skill, and Richard Ney, as her son, repeats the fine performance he gave in "Mrs. Miniver."

While Joan lathered herself for the benefit of the cameras, multiple mirrors caught the reflection of her epidermis and relayed it, so to speak, to the waiting lenses.

"Manila Calling" also shows. A thrilling action drama which features the introduction of three tuneful songs is the exciting "Port of Missing Girls," at the Lyric theatre.

It concerns the adventures of Della, a nightclub singer who is accidentally implicated in a murder, and who escapes from the police by hiding on the boat of mysterious Captain Storm.

How she saves the ship and wins the love of its first mate, and how she finally clears herself of the false charges make thrilling screen fare; in fact, there is nary a tame moment from the opening shot, which neatly disposes of Eddie Kane, in the role of a gang friend who goes into war work. Edward Arnold is a dominant figure as the government official, and Dorothy Morris, Miles Mander, Halliwell Hobbes and Frances Rafferty are other principals.

When bathtub scenes cause censors to lift a forbidding eyebrow, motion picture producers no longer give up the ghost or the scene. They simply summon the prop man and say something like this: "Think up an 'ethical screening' for the bathing shots, so that the star is seen, yet she isn't seen."

For some reason, the star is always a she. This predicament last arose in 20th Century-Fox's filming of "Girl Trouble," a sprightly romantic lark, starring Don Ameche and Joan Bennett.

Owing to the ingenuity of Director Harold Schuster and his ever-present prop expert, Mr. Schuster got his scene. Miss Bennett bathed, and the cinema overseers washed their hands clean of the whole business.

While Joan lathered herself for the benefit of the cameras, multiple mirrors caught the reflection of her epidermis and relayed it, so to speak, to the waiting lenses.

"Ethical" device, in this instance, was an endless flow of steam loosed on the mirrors to shade the exposure of Joan's epidermis.

"Girl Trouble" features Billie Burke, Frank Craven and Alan Dinehart. It was produced by Robert Bassler from a screen play by Ladislav Fodor and Robert Riley Crutcher.

(Lima News Bureau) KENTON, Dec. 8.—Monday, on the first anniversary of the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, the Hardin-Co selective service board sent 76 men to Columbus to take final physical examinations.

Those who passed were returned to Kenton for a week's furlough before starting training. In the group were many men who previously had been placed in 4-E, and others who had been in deferred classification because of dependents.

The local board in announcing receipt of the new government order deterring all men who have passed their 34th birthday, said that nine of the men had to be deferred Monday because of that regulation.

EXPERIENCES ON GADALCANAL ARE RELATED

(Special To The Lima News) ST. MARYS, Dec. 8.—"It was too close for comfort," Pvt. Walter P. Stahl of the U. S. Marines, home from the Solomon Islands, said in describing how a piece of a 1,000 pound bomb struck a tree in low above his head.

Stahl, a former employee of the St. Marys Goodwin, lives at Ohio City. He enlisted in the Marines last May and shortly afterward was on his way to Pearl Harbor where he began his training. From there he was sent to the Solomons as a member of five bomber squadron and saw more than two months of service with the Marines at Guadalcanal. He was with the ground crew.

United States forces are far superior to the Japs, Stahl believes. There was plenty of food and clothing coming thru to the islands when Stahl left for home. He was lucky enough to get a furlough when a plane came in with mail.

Picture of a Railroad

Believe it or not, this is a railroad going full speed ahead—for Victory.

Inside that brightly lighted "factory"—the Eric locomotive repair shop at Hornell, N. Y.—tomorrow's transportation is being made ready tonight.

There, locomotives are rebuilt and repaired by skilled mechanics working in shifts around the clock.

The Eric and other American railroads own and operate 416 such "war factories" plus over 1100 smaller shops, which were in "full production" long before Pearl Harbor.

Railroad workers were then busy improving the whole railroad "plant"—terminals, yards, docks and bridges, as well as tracks and equipment. And, for That purpose, an average of $1,402,000,000 a year was spent.

Now these men are on the job night and day keeping existing equipment rolling. For it takes all of America's 44,300 locomotives, 45,200 passenger cars, and 2,000,000 freight cars—going all the time—to move our war materials, essential consumer goods, service men and other must travelers.

That the increasing demands of wartime transportation have thus been met without confusion or delay is a tribute to these railroad workers. They are doing their job well, with practically no new equipment. What's more, they'll still be on the job when peace comes—to help make this world a better place to live in.
