WASHINGTON, Dec. 10 -(INS) - Barried government stenographers in Washington today resorted to irony in an effort to improve the calibre of dictation they get from profuse capital letter writers.

The stenographers passed around a mimeographed set of "instructions to dictaters," calculated to make executives mend their ways. The "instructions"

1. Under no circumstances speak distinctly. Imagine that you have a mouthful of soup or oatmeal. 2. If unable to comply with rule No. 1, say a few words in a low tone, very rapidly, and then mutter to yourself . . .

Stenographers are good mind 3. Never think what you are to dictate until the stenographer gets to your desk. She probably needs a nap anyway. 4. Call up everyone possible while dictating. Then strike out what you have dictated and start over again. This is good discipline for the stenographer. temper.

This prevents the stenographer from correcting the letter with re-type it-thus improving her speed on a typewriter.

6. Do not under any circumhome. The following children are Tebben, an employe of the stances call for a stenographer scheduled to take part:
