EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON THE STRANGEST GROST TOWN

About one mile from the Holy City of Kairwan. Tunis, is a rock which is considered a town. The rock is the last thing that remains of the city of Sabra, which had a population of 500,000 in the 10th century. It was abandoned, and its houses were carried away and used as hudding material for the nearby Kairwan. The rock was too heavy to carry away and was left in its place. The Arabs consider I holy and cling to the pathetic fiction that the Rock is still the Great City of Sabra. They never enter the ghost city except thru the no longer existing town gate and treat it exactly as if the town were still standing, in all its undiminished glory.
