Shy Scion Of Riches Becomes Valiant Crusader At State

"Highways By Night," Opening Thursday, Co-Featured With Picture Of Navy War On U-Boats

A self-reliant daughter of the people changes a shy son of the rich into a two-fisted crusader in "Highways By Night," which opens Thursday at the State with Richard Carlson and Rence Haal in the leading roles. "The Navy Comes Thru," a stirring drama of the fight against U-boats in the Atlantic, completes the bill. "Who Done It?" and "Flying Fortress" will show thru Wednesday,

Humphrey Bogart, Claude Rains and Ingrid Bergman are even when it's all in fun. Pat O'Brien, currently featured with Giena Ford and Evelyn Keyes at the Quilna theatre in the sensational "Flight Lieutenant," does a job of test-piloting to provide a flaming climax to a motion picture packed with thrills. And Mr. O'Brien-after some 50 films and almost 100 fist fights-has about decided that test-piloting is one assignment he doesn't want to tackle again for a while.

special scenes, O'Brien had to wear a test pilot's uniform, weighing 30 pounds, plus a parachute pack. The one-piece leather outfit was lined with sheetskin; his heavy kneeboots were lined with wool. His helmet was padded and fur lined. And the Southern California sun blazed down!
