500 Notches

If any gun could accommodate that number, Nina Onilova would have 500 notches on her gun. A sergeant commanding a Russian machine gun squad, Nina is credited with destroying 500 Germans. She has been awarded the Order of the Red Banner.

"We are warning you that for each new brutality, payment will be pitilessly exacted on the person or the properties of the guilty. No threat, no sanction can bend us. We shall answer violence, for each blow we shall deliver two. For this we have the men and we have the means."

"We take notice that you are helpless to enforce the laws existing in all civilized countries," the newspaper said. "We take notice that your police officers have placed themselves deliberately outside the law. We are going now to place ourselves on the same ground. They forced us to do so."

"We are warning you that for each new brutality, payment will be pitilessly exacted on the person or the properties of the guilty. No threat, no sanction can bend us. We shall answer violence, for each blow we shall deliver two. For this we have the men and we have the means."

Trade Two for One in France

(From the Office of War Information)

The French underground newspaper, Combat, has addressed an open letter to the Vichy minister of interior, accusing the Nazi dominated French police of torturing members of the underground movement in an effort to obtain information.

The newspaper charged the police had burned the feet
