Uncle Ray's Corner

Thunder Lizards had long necks and long tails. They may have reared on their hind legs at times, but they did not walk or run on two legs. They needed all four of their big, strong legs to hold up their enormous bodies.

A complete hind leg of a Thunder Lizard, in the American Museum of Natural History, New York, is 10 feet high. The height of some of these monsters, from ground to top of back, was 14 feet. With the help of their long necks, they could rear their heads to a height of at least 20 feet.

The name of the Thunder Lizard came from the idea that it made a "noise like thunder" when it walked over the ground. It is believed that some Thunder Lizards weighed more than 30 tons!
