Uncle Ray's Corner

THIS YEAR gardens are being planted in all parts of the United States and Canada where the climate is fit for the growing of vegetables. Many persons who never before held a hoe in their hands are getting out to see what they can do. They feel that they are helping to bring "victory" closer.

"What good," we may ask, "will the gardens do?"

In the first place, the raising of more vegetables in cities and villages will cut down the number of men needed for the raising of crops. This will mean that a greater number of farm workers can join the armed forces of the United Nations.

The gardens, moreover, should keep the price of vegetables from going too high. When there is a food we can send abroad, the less strain there will be among our allies.

Thanks to the process of "dehydration" it is possible to take almost all the water out of vegetables and some other kinds of food. A vessel today can carry a cargo with far greater food value than the same vessel could carry a year or two ago.

An excellent vegetable to plant is the carrot. It is rich in vitamins and most persons find it tasty.

Carrots were known in eastern Europe during ancient times, but it seems that they were not planted in English gardens until four centuries ago. There is a record of the seeds being taken to England from Holland at that time. The English were greatly interested in the pretty green leaves and ladies placed them in their hair as decorations.

The thick upper-root parts of some carrots are yellow; others are reddish or orange. Certain kinds are white, or nearly white.

Besides the carrots which are raised for the table, there are kinds which are grown especially for cattle. These usually are of very large size, and the roots may go down 18 inches or more.

It has been found that cows which are fed on a good amount of carrots in winter produce creamy milk, excellent for butter making.

BUTCHERS DIZZY TOO
LOS ANGELES (AP)—The rationing of meat here is causing the butchers to cut some queer capers. At times they have been forced to reduce the price of porterhouse and sirloin steak to that of hamburgers to keep the choicer cuts from spoiling on their hands. The trouble has been that some people had points for the better cuts but no desire, while others who had the desire didn't have enough points.
