Had No Errors in 342 Chances

Yankees, Cardinals Are 1-0 Winners

The major league spotlight has been centered on peerless pitching performances for so many weeks that it is a definite relief to hand the center of the stage over to quiet, easy-going Bobby Doerr, second baseman of the Boston Red Sox, today. His almost perfect defensive work this season rates him a load of honors. The Red Sox split with the White Sox Friday, winning the 10-inning first game, 8-7, and dropping the nightcap, 5-1, but the twin bill was distinctly notable for Doerr's first error of the season. He was charged with his first miscue when he dropped Luke Appling's pop fly after having handling 342 chances flawless-ly through 59 games to supplant the record of 271 for second basemen established by Oscar Metillo with the Browns in 1933.

Claude Passeau turned in a four-hitter as the Cubs blanked the Braves, 5-0. It was Passeau's fifth straight and 10th win of the year. He faced only 31 men as the Cubs made the most of eight hits, including Stan Hack's three-run double in the fifth.

The Milwaukee Brewers unleashed their heaviest artillery Friday night to down the Toledo Mudhens and move out a full game

The Brewers beat the Mudhens. 4-3, and all their runs were batted in by homers. Ted Norbert drove one into the stands to score Milwaukee's first run in the fourth and Tony York followed suit in the seventh with two team-mates on bases. Wes Livengood received credit for the victory.

Indianapolis dropped a 12-9 slugfest to the Minneapolis Millers. The Millers, inspired by Ab Wright's first inning homer, blasted four Indianapolis hurlers for 17 safeties. Ed Morgan and Jim Trexler hit four-baggers for the Indians but it wasn't enough to keep them in the running.

At Kansas City, the Blues halted a ninth inning rally to heat the Columbus Redbirds, 5-4. The Blues scored all their runs in two big innings, the sixth and the eighth, to stop the third-place Redbirds. Don Hendrickson was the winning pitcher while Frank Barrett was charged with the defeat.

At Louisville, the Colonels mastered the St. Paul Saints with little difficulty. Brown handcuffed the Saints with seven hits as the Colonels registered a 5-2 victory. A second-inning round-tripper by Garrison featured a 12-hit Louisville assault on two St. Paul pit-for him to change his stance at the last second.

The toughest batter to retire, if he can hit at all, is the "poke hitter," who uses a heavier Louisville Slugger, with a thicker handle and not so abruptly tapered as it nears the hitting surface. This "poke hitter" will not strike out often. He'll just try to get the wood on the ball, and punch it to spots in short left, center, or right-or even through the infield. He will grip the bat from three to five inches from the handle knob, spread his feet wide, and guard the plate. A left-handed "poke hitter" is always hard on right-handed pitchers. Stanley Hack of the Cubs is one I don't like to think about. Stan was hard to fool. Joe Sewell of the old Cleveland Indians was of that type, too. Joey averaged about five strikeouts a season.

The trend in batting is away from the long swing. Today men like Enos Slaughter, Joe DiMaggio, Stanley Musial, Pete Reiser, and Bill Dickey use a moderate Totals . . 31 5 7 Totals . . 34 1 7 Their ankles are flexible, and their contents of the conte hate medium
