Farmhand, Husband of Girl, 12, Arrested CHICAGO -(U.P)- A 12-yearold farmer's daughter who eloped with the hired man was playing with dolls today in the Chicago juvenile home. Her husband was in the custody of a deputy sheriff, charged with contributing to the delinquency of Police said the girl, Doris Boling York, eloped with her father's farmhand, Ples Jackson York, 42, last June. From her father's farm at West Burlington, Ia., they went to Kahoka, Mo., where they were married.

The venture ended when the girl wrote a friend at home, "I am so happy here in Chicago." The friend told Doris' father and the farmer filed a complaint against Arrested here, the farmhand was being returned to Iowa. Doris was held pending arrival of her father, who will take her home. Costa Rica shipped 268,000 bunches of bananas to the United States in a recent month.

That story took its place among many others told in ancient Greece. It points out a fact which has lived through time—we cannot call our dear ones back from the grave. They can live in our memory, and the good they have done can still tell its story, but we must go on without the company of those we have lost.
