SOLUTION FOR JAPAN IS SEEN IN EDUCATION

Proposals For Durable Peace Discussed At Christian Mission

The most we can do, so far as Japan is concerned in the post-war peace, is to set up conditions under which the people can educate themselves for the privileges and freedom of democracy. Joe J. Mickle, for many years a professor in a Japanese university, told an audience Friday at the final session of the program of the Christian Mission on World Order.

The essentials of a successful post-war arrangement securing a peace, as listed by Mickle, included economic justice for Japan, a new constitution for its people, and a decentralization of its educational system.

Mickle said he hoped that America would not make the mistake of deposing the emperor of Japan, that it would only make the Mikado a martyr and make impossible a program of permanent peace. "Democracy must come by degrees," he said, "through education, and over a long time."

Two Bases Seen

Continuing the same trend of thought, Paul Hutchinson, editor of the Christian Century, spoke of "two bases for world order." The first, an order of force, has already been attempted by Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo, and found wanting. The second, an order of consent, is based on the idea that "nations attempt to bring into being an organization based on the principle of such approximate justice that nations will come into it gladly."

The editor pointed to several indications that we might be entering the final phase, at least in a military sense, of the war in Europe, and urged his audience to give thought to the nature of the international order that must come. Nothing can be gained by going back to the chaos from whence we came, he intimated.

The afternoon sessions in the church were held at 2 p. m., when a continuation of the morning discussion was arranged, and at 3 p. m. when the speakers were assigned to three groups, composed of lay people, ministers, and church school leaders.

Dr. Willis J. King, Negro clergymen and president of Gammon Theological Seminary, Atlanta, Ga., was the speaker at the morning session, with Rev. Jackson E. Smith, Cincinnati pastor, and Franz Schoenberner, prominent anti-Nazi leader now a German refugee, addressing the various sessions which followed.

In addition to the meetings held in the church, the speakers were assigned to Shawnee high school, at 9:45 a. m., and to Central and South high schools at 12:45 p. m.

Concluding their first week of daily visits to the larger cities of Ohio, the team left Lima to resume the second week Monday in Cincinnati. Before appearing here, the team appeared in Cleveland, Canton, Akron and Columbus.

Cohen, Smith, Miller, Brown, Levy and Schwartz are the six most listed surnames, in the order given, in the Manhattan, New York City, telephone directory.

FLIER SAYS ANNIHILATING JAPS LIKE SHOOTING DOGS

(Special To The Lima News)

NEW BREMEN, Nov. 6—Mr. and Mrs. Emil J. Koenig have received two letters from their son, Lt. David E. Koenig, pilot with the air force bomber command, who was reported missing Oct. 18 in the New Britain area. In the letters, dated Oct. 13 and Oct. 16, he wrote in part:

"The best way to tell you what I'm doing and where I am is to read your newspaper of this date about things in the southwest Pacific area. You know what kind of airplane I fly and so you ought to know what I'm doing. (At least 104 enemy planes were reported destroyed Oct. 13 in the Pacific area.)

"Flying isn't so bad, some days being worse than others. In the past week I have been chased by Zeros, and we were sure knocking down plenty of them. If you ever get one of those 'missing in action' reports from the War department, please don't worry because there is a very good chance I'm living a good life with the natives, as they are definitely on our side. Many of the boys are coming out of the jungle in good health, some of them not having had contact with the outside world in 14 months. Just remember that if anyone can take care of himself in a pinch I can.

"I did not send home any money as I said I would. I have not been near a civilized enough place to send any, or even to get paid. A person spends about $1 a month here, and in doing this is extravagant. This is quite a

CONTRACT FOR ENGINEERING WORK AWARDED

Performing what probably was his last official act in office, Mayor Frank E. McClain Saturday hired the H. P. Jones and Co. engineering firm of Toledo, to prepare plans and specifications for Lima's proposed $330,000 water filtration plant expansion.

The contract, signed by Mayor McClain, calls for a fee of $15,260. This is $2,250 under the maximum figure of $17,500 appropriated Monday night by city council.

The contract price does not include supervision of construction. However, the contract provides that the Toledo firm, if called upon by the city and contracts entered into, it will supervise construction at a figure of 2 1/2 percent of the price at which contracts are awarded.
