Webster Gets Luggage From Fellow Workers

B. O. Webster, 70, superintendent of fisheries for the state conservation department who is retiring under the new state retirement system, was presented with a traveling bag at a party given in his honor Friday at the office of the conservation department.

S. Broom, 51, entered the U. S. bureau of fisheries service in 1899; came to Wisconsin as superintendent of the state fish hatchery at Wild Rose in 1909; was appointed a member of the then reorganized three-man conservation commission in 1921, and shortly after became state superintendent of fisheries.

OKAY, DR. PROBE! YOU'RE THE MEDICAL EXAMINER— BUT THIS DOESN'T LOOK SIMPLE TO ME!

SMALL AND CLOSE AS THIS ROOM IS A HEALTHY MAN WOULDN'T DIE HERE OF OXGENATION AND THIS SHOPPING BAG—

—IT WAS RECENTLY FILLED WITH SOMETHING I NOTICE HOW IT LET AN HURRYBY IN THE NAP OF THE EAR.

I'M GOING TO RUN SOME TESTS ON IT IN MY LAB!

EXCUSE ME, MR. DRABER— BUT THERE'S SOMETHING I WANT TO ASK YOU ABOUT THESE!

JOE FEIGNS SLEEP— HOURS— DRAG BY— AND AGAIN SPRINK QUIETLY OPENING THE DARKENED PORTHOLE GLASS.

HE LIGHTS A MATCH AND IS ABOUT TO PUT IT TO THE PORTHOLE.

UGH!!!

HEY— WHAT'S GOING ON—

D-DON'T PUT NO LIGHT ON— THE PORTHOLE'S OPEN—

Uncle Ray's Corner

No metal known to man is as hard as the diamond. A diamond can be cracked or broken by the blow of a hammer, but it is far harder than the steel in the hammer.

Diamonds have been known for many hundreds of years. Probably India was the first country in which they were mined, and the ancient Romans obtained a small number of them through foreign trade. One Roman said the diamond was "the most costly of gems, known only to kings."

At present Africa produces far more diamonds than all other continents combined. The Kimberley mines of South Africa are among those which are very rich.

India now produces far more rubies than diamonds, but one of the world's interesting diamond stories goes back to India.

The famous Koh-i-nor diamond was owned by an Indian rajah 650 years ago. It had been in his family for a long time, but he had no record of where it came from. Very possibly some humble workman had spied it in a river bed and had sold it to the rajah's ancestors.

In 1304 the rajah lost a war. As a result, he was forced to give up the diamond to the sultan who defeated him.

In the next four centuries, the Koh-i-nor diamond was passed down from one prince or noble to another. In 1759 a conqueror named Nadir took power in Delhi, India, but when he entered the palace the big diamond could not be found.

The shah whom Nadir had conquered had been made prisoner, but he was allowed to watch the ceremony when the new ruler took the throne. Nadir suspected that the shah had hidden the diamond in his turban.

Not wishing to make such a claim without proof, Nadir said to the shah:

"Give me your turban, and I will give you mine. This exchange will prove that we are friends!"

That is how the Koh-i-nor diamond received its name.
