

Quartet to Play at 8 Tonight

Mozart, Beethoven Music on Program

The Pro Arte quartet will give a free concert of chamber music at 8 tonight in Music hall auditorium, playing Mozart's C-major and Beethoven's F-major (Opus 59) quartets. The Mozart work startled the musical world at its first performance with the obvious discords and dashes of the first movement. In Mozart's day, many musicians "corrected" the music, thinking the composer had made mistakes in the score. The music was designed, however, to introduce a new style of writing which emphasized the discord and strife of the first section to allow a feeling of serenity to emerge in the later passages. The Beethoven quartet is considered a test of musicianship for its performers, because of its difficulty and the unusual delicacy required in the slow movement.

Guy Sorel as Alexander Hamilton and Walter Hampden as Thomas Jefferson in "The Patriots," Sidney Kingsley's prize-winning play, coming to the Parkway theater Feb. 14 and 15. There will be a matinee Tuesday.

Tickets Available Beginning Monday

"The Boors," Wisconsin Players' Feb. 18 and 19 production, has all of the color of mid-18th century Venice, with costumes featuring full skirts, powdered wigs, and knee breeches making it as colorful as it is scintillating. Directing the play will be Blanche Muldrow, a graduate student from Milledgeville, Ga. No seats will be sold for the production, John E. Dietrich, Players' business manager, has announced. Those who have season coupons may exchange them for a night ticket, beginning Monday, by mailing them to the Union theater box office. Tickets will be given in exchange for coupons to the limit of the two houses. The play will be presented in the Wisconsin Union theater.
