THE STORY: Kitty Bishop comes to the suburban home of her brother, Ben Graham, and his wife, Peg, to recuperate from her sudden divorce from Collins Bishop, a meteorically successful young lawyer.

Kitty lay rigidly awake. It was the faint but just distinguishable murmur from Ben and Peg's room that did it to her.

Loving and losing. What you didn't know didn't hurt you, but what you had and then had lost hurt. That faint murmur from another room, two people together, belonging, was heavy punishment.

And she hadn't slept well for a long time. She kept remembering things and trying to puzzle out all the reasons why things had gone wrong. She could see some of them, but they didn't add up to the whole answer.

What puzzled Kitty now, what she tried to remember and couldn't, were the little things that must have pointed the way to trouble ahead. To the really big danger signals of last November. November seemed almost further away than the dazed happiness of sudden love, the wedding commotion that was over three years away. Last November seemed another age, not just a few months away. Before she was divorced. Before Pearl Harbor.

Kitty remembered lying awake on another night, in November.

"Tonight," Collins had announced with determination at breakfast, "I'm coming home for dinner like a Christian. I don't care what breaks loose it can wait until morning."

"That's the old common sense beginning to percolate again," Kitty had approved. "Welcome home. All is forgiven. No questions asked. Have them send you back in a plain wrapper, darling."

Ever since the middle of summer Collins had been busier and busier. His working hours had grown longer and longer, he'd disappeared more and more frequently in Washington in answer to demanding calls from Mr. Hall, whom Kitty was beginning to dislike. And for the past few weeks, between still more Washington, and more evenings of working, Collins had hardly been home except to sleep.

Late in the afternoon she set about arranging the stage for Collins' reunion with home life. She set the table herself for a party, a real party, for two. She enjoyed making herself look festive, too, and put on a gold-colored dress and a round gold-colored hat.

By 6 o'clock everything was more than ready. In fact the bucket of melting ice cubes had been returned to the refrigerator and Kitty's enthusiasm was beginning to melt around the edges, too. The telephone rang.

"Kitty," said Collins, an edge of irritation in his voice, "I can't make it. There's no use waiting dinner. But I'll be home some time during the evening."

"That's nice," said Kitty, with even, silky control while her eyes gazed upon a table foolish with flowers, candles and silver.

"What? Look, why don't you take yourself to the movies or something?"

"Why don't I?" inquired Kitty pleasantly.

"That's the question," agreed Kitty.

There was a fraction of a minute's silence. Kitty could almost feel the pressure at Collins' end of the wire, and a weary impatience at still another obstructive detail.

"Just a detail," thought Kitty. "That's me."

"Well," said Collins, "it's another of those days."

"Yes," said Kitty, "it is, isn't it?"

There was another pause. As tho, if Collins had had time, he'd have said more. But he didn't have time.

"See you later," he said. "We'll talk."

"Maybe," thought Kitty rebelliously, but she said good-by politely and hung up.

Kitty didn't go to the movies; she didn't call anybody up; and she didn't read, altho she pretended to. When Collins came in around 11, she was in bed looking blindly at a magazine. She yawned to indicate that she wasn't feeling talkative. Collins looked tired. Kitty thought his eyes fell more gratefully on his bed than on her.

"Tough break," he said. "But you know, Kitty, I didn't get that raise for my good looks."

"How narrow-minded of your superior," said Kitty.

Collins dropped off a shoe with great relief and remarked rather coldly that, of course, it was a nuisance he had to work for a living, but after all they had to live.

"That," said Kitty, "is an open question. Do we live, as what I ask myself."

"What do you call it?" demanded Collins abruptly exasperated. "I haven't quite decided."

With that she put the magazine on the bed-table and covered herself for sleep. Collins let her go ahead and do it. Neither of them spoke again, even after the room was dark.

Kitty sat bolt upright. This time dark, in the chilly silence of Doremas dark. She was furious at her craven mind for delving into the past.

She snapped on the light and look for the book she'd brought upstairs, but it was too cold to read. She got up and plodded around hunting for aspirin.

3 REPUBLICANS TO SEEK OFFICE

Announce Candidacies For Putnam-co Posts

(Lima News Bureau) OTTAWA, Feb. 18.—Three Republican candidates for Putnam-co offices announced today that they are going to run in the May 9 primary election.

Charles H. Veach of Kalida is a candidate for representative to the general assembly. J. D. Jones of Union-twp is running for clerk of courts. Hurley Hook of Van Buren-twp is a candidate for county commissioner.

Veach is an attorney and farmer. He is a graduate of Ohio Northern university and has practiced law for many years in Kalida. For the last 15 years he also has been manager of a large farm near Kalida.

Both Jones and Hook have been active in politics in their home communities. Jones is a member of the Putnam-co fair board while Hook has been a school board member for several years.

Announcement also was made here today of the delegates selected by the Putnam-co Republican Central committee for the state convention.

They are Dr. C. W. Eagle, Mrs. Myrtle Edwards, Arnold Lauer, Cliff Getman, Roger Hersh, J. H. Pickles, Leo Slusser, D. O. Corkwell, R. B. Troyer, J. D. Jones and Harry Collier.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 18.—(UP)—The Army said today that paint was playing a major role in reducing the beachhead confusion which attends any invasion operation.

Col. Fred A. McMahon, commanding the Philadelphia ordnance district, said that in past operations boxes and containers put ashore under enemy fire bore 175 different hues.

"With the cooperation of the various war department agencies," he said, "Army ordnance has eliminated 103 superfluous shades and standardized 72 colors."

When the all-out offensive against the mainland of Europe is launched, each branch of the armed services will have a distinguishing color for its shipments. Likewise, bombs of varying types will have a particular identifying color to facilitate their handling in the confusion of battle.

Maine was part of Massachusetts until 1820.

DAYTON, O., Feb. 18.—(INS)

A partly completed warehouse building at the new Army Signal Corps depot on Wilmington pike just outside Dayton was swept by a fire late last night causing damage estimated at $100,000. Army public relations officials announced today the damage caused by the flames would delay the completion of the $3,000,000 project for several weeks, officials said.

H. W. Murray, project manager of the Corbetta construction firm of New York, builders of the project, said most of the damage was done to concrete forms and a section of the concrete roof. The origin of the fire was unknown. The Army Engineer's Corps, directed by Col. Edwin C. Land, began an immediate investigation.
