The end of National Sew and Save Week, observed Feb. 19-26 by Madison merchants, finds the Madison Free library experiencing a brisk turnover in practical "how-to-make-it" books dealing with such subjects as slip covers, mending, and dress design, Margaret Nordholm, head of the circulation department, said Sat-Busy house wives, newly supplied with gay prints, stur-dy drapery materials, buttons, and bias tape, evidently have not forgotten to stop at the corner of Carroll and Dayton for guidance in the effective use of limited wartime supplies. "Better Dressmaking," by Ruth Wyeth Spears, is a good example of the type of aid available. In addition to such chapters as "Ten Types of Pockets" and "Making a Tailored Coat and Handling Fur," a dictionary of more than 250 fabrics and fabric terms is an aid for further shopping to continue the sew and save campaign. Topping her list of favorite books in this field is "Mending Made Easy," by Mary B. Picken, Miss Nordholm says. With-out the subtitle, "The ABC of Fabric Conservation," the title is misleading, however, for this book includes "how to reinforce the worn spots and paich the torn ones so that nobody will ever know; how to lengthen the life of the hard-to-replace overcoat, girdle, or glove; how to make over things from hopeless ones, dress up the dowdy ones, clean up the shabby ones." Selection of becoming colors and "streamlining machine scwing" are topics in "Modern Dressmaking Made Easy," written by same author. Attractive and comprehensive is a recent addition to the dressmaker's shelf, "Needles and Pins," by Ida Duncan. Particular attention is given to types of fabrics and their care, measurements, pattern drafting, remodeling, and renovation, "Modern Pattern Design," by Harriet Pepin, is a guide to the creation of patterns as a means of designing smart wearing appearel, while "Distinctive Clothes, How to Select and Make Them," by Frances Consalus, gives special emphasis to adapting patterns, advanced machine work, and children's garments. Is that slip cover wearing thin or that lamp shade dis-colored? For guidance in making the home a brighter place for the defense worker and the family member on furlough, library patrons may turn to "Easy to Make Slip Covers," by Herbert Bast, and "Home Decoration With Fabric and Thread," in which the author, Ruth W. Spears, includes a dictionary of fabrics used in home decoration. Similar topics are covered in Kay Hardy's Beauty Treatments for the Home," which provides directions for making draperies, slip covers, lamp shades, accessories and for upholstering and reupholstering, finishing and refinishing furniture. "How to Sew" by Nina Jordan offers reassurance to the beginner, also, for the author's numerous clear diagrams make it possible for one who has never sewed to mend, stitch, make buttonholes, and cut patterns. Written in simple language, this book is useful to younger readers, as well as to adults inexperienced in practical dressmaking.
