Uncle Ray's Corner

to Cross the Rubicon

When Julius Caesar was about 42 years old, he set out on travels which were to make him famous. The travels were not taken with the purpose of "seeing sights." They were for the purpose of adding to the power of Rome in the land now called France, In those days that region was known as "Gaul." Before leaving Rome, Caesar had held the office of "consul." With a rich man named Crassus, and with a general named Pompey, he became one of the three main rulers of the Roman empire.

For almost 10 years, Caesar stayed away from Rome. He led armies against German tribes at the northern border of Gaul, Much Rubicon. of the fighting took place in the valley of the Rhine river. Caesar also made two invasions of Britain. Roman legions for the first time stepped on the soil of the island now known as Great Britain. For a time they camped Caesar decided to strike fast and your scrapbook.) hard. At the head of his loyal soldiers, he crossed a stream on the border of Gaul and marched on Rome.

The stream was the Rubicon, had been captured and put to and we have today the expression death. Pompey had grown jealous "crossing the Rubicon," meaning of Caesar, and had been working that we take an important step to make himself the one and only from which we cannot turn back.
