"Canes" for Walking Sticks

kept a place with men through the ages. No longer does anyone need to fear wild animals in most trips, but a walking stick can be used to hold off an angry dog.

More persons are bitten by dogs than the general public knows. Many a milkman, postman and trash collector has suffered women who walked through Eurfrom such bites — but they do not ope on the way to the Holy Land carry canes!

The cane-carrying custom has fallen away in most places. Yet I of travelers who secretly took silkremember how common it was Back in olden times shepherds had canes of a sort. They were known as "shepherd's staffs," or "shepherd's crooks." The latter name came from the crooked handles which the staffs often had.

In the Middle Ages men and carried "pilgrim's staffs," These walking sticks often had hollows at the top. Stories have come to us worm eggs and saffron seeds in hollow staffs from Asia into Europe.

Many kinds of wood have been used in making walking sticks These include oak, ash, hazel and blackthorn. The name "cane" aros from the fact that certain cane palms produce good material for walking sticks. The best of these palms grow in China, India and the Malay area.
