The highest peak in Switzerland rises less than three miles above sea level. Bolivia, on the other hand, has three peaks which are four miles above sea level! One of these is Mount Sorata, and its height is given as 21,500 feet. It is not the highest peak in the Andes mountains but is one of the top live.

TIN AND SCENERY ARE BOLIVIA'S MAIN FEATURES

Of the countries in South America, there are two without a sca coast. These are Paraguay and Bolivia had some sea coast a century ago, but lost it to Chile as a result of the "War of the Pacific." That war cut off the Pacific coast from Bolivia. Tin and scenery may be called the two great features of Bolivia. Bolivia is the only part of the New World with a large supply of Malaya and the Dutch East Indies rank ahead of Bolivia in out-put of tin, but those lands are now in the hands of the Japanese. If than any in Switzerland, the United Nations did not have Bolivian tin, we should be in great trouble in this field. Even as it is, we do not have enough tin to meet all our needs. As to scenery, Bolivia hardly needs to bow to any country on earth. It has some of the most stately mountains to be found
