

Tale Of Thoroughbreds Opens At Quilna On Thursday

Colorful horse-races and the tale of thoroughbreds combine to make "Home in Indiana" opening with a premiere Thursday night at the Quilna one of the most interesting picture shows of all times. Many of the scenes in the picture were shot in Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky and included in the film are the races at the Sandusky fair in Fremont and the fair at Marion. Technicolor adds all its glory to the film. Closing just prior to the premiere showing are "Troadero" and "Rose the Roster."

Opening Friday at the Ohio theatre will be "Lady in the Dark" with Ginger Rogers portraying the youthful fashion editor with the strange psychosis. Plying at the theatre for the last time Thursday night is "See Here Private Hargrove."

As usual laughs are provided by the youthful star of "Henry Aldrich, Cupid" now at the Sigma along with "Back Door to Heaven."

Two laugh hits are currently convulsing theatre goers at the State where "Rationing" and "Her Primitive Man" are now billed. "Devil Riders" and "Jungle Book" are the two fascinating pictures offered at the Lyric.

Beginning Friday the Majestic will have "Holiday Inn" and "Ghost Riders."

With "My Kingdom for a Cook" slated to start Friday night at the Lima Drive-In "The Heat's On" will end its run with the showings Thursday night.

When Ginger Rogers switches from a sleekly-dressed fashion magazine editor to a schoolgirl of twelve for her role in "Lady in the Dark" due Friday at the Quilna the transformation is simpler than you might think.

Ginger removes all make-up combs her hair down her back and ties it with a ribbon on top of her head takes off a form-fitting suit and replaces it with a white middie blouse and pleated blue skirt, puts on black stockings and flat heeled shoes and carries a large straw sailor hat.

And presto, change of She knocks off twenty years immediately.

In "Lady in the Dark" Ginger is co-stared with Ray Milland, Warner Baxter and Jon Hall in a story about a young editor of a fashion magazine, "Allure" whose dream complex brings her mental discomfort. Ginger, as the editor, has a disturbing time of it while making up her mind about the man of her dreams. The final chapter, though, brings a happy ending.
