Lifting of Racing Ban

METHUEN, Mass.—(U.P.)— The Christian League of Methuen, the nation's oldest federation of Protestant churches, protested today to War Mobilization Director Fred M. Vinson against the proposed lifting of the horse-racing ban.

The Kaffirs, however, had their own religion. Their chief god was known as Quamata, and they gave sacrifice to spirits. Most of the sacrificing was done in honor of evil spirits, and the purpose of it was to keep such spirits from hurting the living.

There was a strong belief in withcraft among the Kaffirs, and

M. Vinson against the proposed lifting of the horse-racing ban.

The league declared the ban should persist "while there is still need for the restricted use of gasoline for the speedy end of the global war."

There was a strong pener in witchcraft among the Kaffirs, and to this day they have witch doctors who are men of importance. A witch doctor is expected to find out whether any witch is causing harm. He uses spells to work harm. He uses spells to work against the wicked spells which are supposed to be cast by witches.

The Kaffirs have a rule against WASHINGTON — (U.R) — Rep. law, and also against a mother-in-law going where she might be duced legislation Monday to give seen by him. What a task they business firms tax relief during must have, keeping out of each

Old-time Kaffir warriors were armed with spears, shields and clubs. The clubs were made of wood and had heavy heads. When on a peaceful trip, a warrior was likely to carry a spear decked with feathers, the feathers being a sign

KAFFIRS TO KILL ALL CATTLE OF WHITES

The name "Kaffir" came from the Arabic language. It means "unbeliever," and is about the same as "heathen" or "pagan" in our language.
Arabs who visited southern Africa long ago gave the Kaffir

Leathers, the feathers being a sign of peace.

The Boers and other white settlers in southern Africa often fought against the Kaffirs. There was trouble about cattle stealing and the right to use land. Fierce Kaffir wars took place from time to time in the period between 1809 and 1878.

Witch doctors told the Kaffir

Witch doctors told the Kaffir warriors that they must kill every head of cattle owned by white men. If that happened, it was said, all the ancient warriors of the tribe would come back from the dead, and would drive the whites dead, and would drive the whites into the sea.

As it turned out, the Kaffirs failed to kill all the cattle of the settlers from Europe. They lost one war after another, and were driven farther and farther away from the southern end of Africa.
