breathing and smelling.

The sense of smell is one of the after people "smelled something burning." It is simple to put out a fire which is small, and the quick work of the nose has saved many a house from going up in There is a network of thin nerves inside the nose. These nerves catch odors, and sent messages about them to the brain, A chemical action takes place, and this makes it possible to tell one odor from another.

Breathing through the nose is more healthful than breathing through the mouth. Inside the nos-trils are hairs which strain dust from air, and keep the dust from reaching the lungs.

Another service of the nose is to warm the air which is on the way to the lungs. Almost always, the feeling, hearing and sight. Thanks air around us is cooler than the to this sense, we can enjoy the blood, but it is warmed almost to odor of flowers.

Women often use perfume in an through the winding passages of
