

"When Strangers Marry" Opens At Lyric Theatre

Showing the cumulative effect of fear on a man hunted by the law, "When Strangers Marry" opens Monday at the Lyric theatre.

Spencer Tracy and Katharine Hepburn are co-starring for the third time in "Without Love" now at the Ohio theatre. They had been teamed previously in "Woman of the Year," and "Keeper of the Flame."

With Laurence Olivier and Merle Oberon heading a cast of prominent players, one of the most important productions to date, "Wuthering Heights" continues its stay at the Quilna theatre.

More fun is in store for you at the State theatre where "Here Come the Waves," with Bing Crosby, Betty Hutton (in a dual role) and Sonny Tufts is now showing.

Just how far he proposed to go in curbing the military's powers in taking punitive action against its own personnel, Kilday was uncertain yesterday when he gave his views at a committee meeting.

But he indicated that he favored removal of court martial powers in peacetime except in cases involving minor infractions of regulations. Certainly, the Texan said, in time of peace, military personnel accused of major crimes should be dealt with by civil courts.

A member of the military committee, Kilday said he will submit his proposal as an amendment to legislation providing for compulsory peacetime military training.
