Caterpillars are the young, or larvas, of certain kinds of insects. Most of them are in a stage of a trip which will end when they are butterflies or moths. Some however, will turn into sawflies or scorpion flies if they live through the dangers of life.

A caterpillar may seem to have many legs, but it has only three pairs of true legs. The true legs are near the front of the body, fust behind the head.

You may not be able to see the eyes of a caterpillar, but there are 12 tiny eyes, six on each side of the head.

Many caterpillars have hair on their bodies, but others are smooth, without a trace of hair.

Caterpillars have fairly strong jaws, but the food is made up mainly of leaves. Only a few kinds feed on anything which is not part of a plant.

A caterpillar but there are 12 tiny eyes, six on each side of the head.
