tory, Russia has had the poorest seaports among all the big nations. As a result of the first World war, Russia lost Finland and the Baltic States. With those losses went seaports which had been of value.

Shortly after the second World war broke out, Russia entered the Baltic States, and took them over. Baltic States, and took them over. British was done with the consent of Hitler, who no doubt expected that mouth turned it over to Japan to the harbor.

Trunk-line railways run from Russia to Riga and other ports on the Baltic sea. This partly explains the importance Russia places on having the Baltic States in the Soviet Union.

Back in 1905 Russia lost an ice-free port in Asia. This was Port Arthur, which had been leased the Consent of Hitler, who no doubt expected that mouth turned it over to Japan to the harbor.
