BAD WIESSEE, Germany — A small lakeside hotel where correspondents attached to the third army are now billeted here was the scene 11 years ago of one of the biggest and, so far, only partly told stories of Hitler's career. That was the blood purge of June 30, 1934, in which Der Fuehrer and Dr. Goebbels came here personally to arrest Ernst Roehm, head of the brownshirt S. A., on a charge of plotting to overthrow the gov ernment. Needless to say, no American correspondents could then cover the event on the spot, but in this village the chief eye-witness
